Senate Silver Bloc Begins Filibuster to Force Ballot

Long Talks Two Hours and Blocks Action on Other Bills.

Glass Industry Aid Measure Put Aside

White Metal's Backers Hope to Disrupt Roosevelt Plan.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Leaders of the Senate silver bloc yesterday decided to resort to filibuster tactics to prevent action there on any legislation until a vote is held on measures to improve the status of the white metal, or until an agreement for such a vote is reached.

Immediately putting the plan into execution, Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, talked for more than two hours, successfully preventing a vote either on the Frazier farm-debt amendment to the corporate bankruptcy bill or the measure itself.

Earlier in the day the Senate laid aside until Monday the Glass loans-for-industry bill to which Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, had offered his silver nationalization and purchase proposal.

The purpose of postponing action on the Glass bill and silver proposal was to see what might develop from the conference scheduled tomorrow between the Senate silver bloc committee and President Roosevelt.

See Administration Delay.

The leaders in the silver fight, however, privately professed to believe that the Administration leaders might be deferring action on their program until other major pieces of legislation are passed. Consequently, they explained, they had decided to have the show-down come at once—and to stall the legislative machinery until it comes.

Before the Senate laid aside the Glass bill with its pending silver amendment, the silvery-haired, well-groomed Thomas withdrew his proposal as a strategic move. Long immediately offered the Dies bill as reported by the Senate Agricultural Committee, as an amendment to the Glass measure, and then Thomas offered his proposal as a substitute for the Long amendment.

The purpose of this maneuver was to get before the Senate at one time both the Dies bill and the less drastic Thomas proposal. The way is open to place a third proposition before the Senate, as an amendment to the Thomas proposal. This place is being reserved for any compromise proposal which may come from tomorrow's meeting at the White House.

Caught in Moratorium Plan.

Even though the silver issue formally was withdrawn from the Senate until Monday, it became inextricably entwined in debate with the proposal of Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), of North Da-

1 Slain, 5 Shot In Havana Riot

Soldiers Fire On Students After Tear Gas Fails to End Disorder.

Havana, May 3 (AP).—Rifle and submachine gun fire that soldiers turned upon a group of rioting students this afternoon killed one student and wounded five persons, one of them a soldier.

The disorder occurred in front of a high school in the center of Havana when students defied efforts of guards to disperse them. Finally the youths were forced back into the building by tear gas.

Subsequently, the students emerged and dragged benches out into the street to form barricades. They refused to let traffic pass the building and the soldiers opened fire directly at them.

A police captain arrived and ordered the troops to cease firing. They did so for a few minutes, only to reopen the attack while the captain haranged the students in an attempt to get them to disperse.

A scene of wild disorder ensued while the youths rushed for shelter, leaving several comrades wounded in the street.

Bullets struck an 85-year-old man and made necessary the amputation of a leg. A high pitch of excitement prevailed as doctors sought to aid the wounded.

"This is worse than Machado," the students shouted, referring to the administration of former President Gerardo Machado. They declared they could not give first aid to their companions in the school building because of the tear gas. Three students were wounded by bullets.

Mother, Son United After 26-Year Hunt

The end of a quarter-century separation come yesterday when Gene Hugenschmidt and his mother, Mrs. James E. Kidwell, of Ballston, Va., were brought together in police headquarters.

Sun-bronzed Gene Hugenschmidt knows where Journey's End is this May morning.

It's in the arms of his mother, from whom he had been separated for almost 26 years and for whom he had searched on a weary trail over the Nation ever since 1925.

In a quiet, clean, pleasant house in Ballston, Va., the son has joined his mother, Mrs. James E. Kidwell.

"You're not 27 years old to me, Frankie, and you're not Gene," says Mrs. Kidwell. "You're the 15-months old baby who was kidnaped while I slept—kidnaped with your

Mrs. Whitney Is Crowned Apple Queen

11th Ruler Takes Oath at Winchester as 5,000 "Subjects" Cheer.

By C. B. Carr.

Winchester, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—Promising to "govern my domain with prudence and justice, according to the laws and customs of the same," Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Altemus Whitney, internationally known sportswoman and wife of John Hay Whitney, of turf fame, was crowned Queen Shenandoah XI of the Apple Blossom Festival here this afternoon amid a setting resplendent with the heritage of ancient royal customs and rituals.

A heavy rain caused the coronation to be removed from the Handley Stadium to the auditorium of Handley High School, where more than 5,000 persons filled every inch of room and cheered "All hail the queen" as Lewis Douglas, director of the Federal budget, Washington, placed the jeweled crown of the House of Shenandoah upon Mrs. Whitney's brow.

Mrs. Whitney—"Queen Elizabeth" to her host of admiring "subjects"—was resplendent in a gown of rare old lace, with a lace train of great length, diamond earrings and a diamond brooch, as she presented herself for enthronement according to the ancient rites of the church and the state.

R. Gray Williams, Winchester attorney, acting as minister of the crown, administered the oath of a ceremony translated into modern English from the Anglo-Saxon by the Rev. Dr. S. L. Flickinger, Winchester minister and ritualistic student of National note.

Mayor Charles R. Anderson, representing the City of Winchester, presented Queen Shenandoah XI with a key to the city. The key was carved by John W. Naill, Win-

Parking Ban On F, G, 7th To Be Lifted

All-Day Restriction Ruins Business, Merchants Tell Officials.

The all-day parking ban on portions of F, G and Seventh streets in the commercial area will be lifted within a few days, it was decided yesterday by the District Commissioners after they heard protests from merchants that the ban is ruinous to their business.

In an attempt to relieve traffic congestion in the area, however, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will urge the Commissioners to prohibit parking during the morning and evening rush hours on the same thoroughfares subjected to the all-day restriction.

This restriction would be invoked between 8 and 9:30 a. m. and 4 and 6 p. m. In other hours there will be a one-hour parking limitation. The rush hour restriction was suggested by a joint committee, representing trade bodies. This group also suggested an hour parking limit in the entire commercial area, but Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will suggest the one-hour limit only on the same streets where the all-day ban was ordered.

When he announced the ban will be lifted, Commissioner Hazen emphasized that he expects merchants will adhere rigidly to their promise to cooperate with the Police Department in discouraging violations of the new rules.

"I expect that all merchants will strive to eliminate double parking, particularly of their own trucks, and if any of their employes are discovered violating the rules, the employers will be held to strict accountability," he said.

The suggestion of the merchants' committee that legislation be enacted to empower the police to impound automobiles which are parked overtime will not be pressed at this

Bungling Saved Thaw in Trial As Killer, Evelyn Nesbit Writes

New York, May 3 (AP).—Evelyn Nesbit, in an autobiography to be published tomorrow, says the late William Travers Jerome as prosecutor in the Stanford White murder trial bungled the case against Harry K. Thaw.

Vividly, frankly, the actress—the toast of Broadway at the turn of the century—lives again through that June night in 1906 when Thaw, the scion of the Pittsburgh family of millions, killed the great architect as he sat with Miss Nesbit at dinner atop the old Madison Square Garden.

Even though she was married to Thaw, the playboy of Paris and New York, Miss Nesbit writes that she had loved White for several years and loved him that night.

For Thaw, she said she had only pity.

Miss Nesbit labels as false the long-accepted version that Thaw killed White in a fit of rage after finding the two dining together.

Thaw, she writes, had long held a grudge against White, dating to the time several years previously when the debonair White disrupted Thaw's plans for an after-the-theater party by taking the invited showgirls off to a feast of his own.

After their marriage, the actress says, Thaw practiced for several hours daily at targets until he was skilled with his pistol.

In discussing the famous trial, Miss Nesbit says Jerome, from the outset, wanted only an insanity verdict against Thaw, and purposely failed to call witnesses, prominent in social circles, who could have proved his point of premeditation.

She said Thaw was a "prisoner-at large" during his period of incarceration at an asylum for criminal insane; that she saw him at will and took nightly rides with him into Connecticut.

It was these trips, she said, that resulted in her becoming a mother. She says she went to Germany to await the birth of her son.

Bullet Spray Aids $12,000 Bank Theft

Police Chief Near Death After Brave Effort to Halt Bandits.

Leader of Pair Redhead and Used Dillinger Bank Technique.

Fostoria, Ohio, May 3 (AP).—Spraying the business district with machine gun fire, two robbers escaped today after a $12,000 holdup of the First National Bank in which four persons were wounded.

Police Chief Frank Culp, who braved the murderous fire armed only with a pistol, was shot in the lungs and is not expected to recover.

The thugs forced William Daub, 40, assistant cashier, and Miss Ruth Harris, 22, bookkeeper, to act as shields for their getaway when citizens armed with rifles opened fire from rooftops.

Leader Redheaded.

Witnesses differed as to whether the pair's red-haired leader resembled Dillinger. A teller, Ralph Barbour, said he thought the man had the notorious desperado's characteristics, but Andrew Emerine, bank president, disagreed.

Police recalled that Emil Wanatka, proprietor of the Little Bohemia resort at Mercer, Wis., who was Dillinger's "host" recently, said the fugitive had dyed his hair red.

Concealing machine guns under topcoats which they dropped upon entering the bank, the robbers ordered half a dozen employes of the bank to line up against a wall while they looted the cages.

Car Double-Parked Bandits' Car.

Chief Culp noticed the double-parked car in front of the bank. Suspecting a holdup, the chief told Patrolman Ross Staegger to return to headquarters for a machine gun and reinforcements. Culp walked into a lobby alongside the banking quarters.

"There won't be any shooting as long as you do as you're told," one thug was warning when he noticed the chief's uniform. The bandit whirled and started to shoot.

Chief Culp tried to return the fire, but when he was struck, he fell behind an elevator shaft. Business men armed themselves quickly and assembled in front of the bank. The robbers fired at them through windows.

Use Latest Methods.

The robbers used the latest bank hold-up technique. They forced bank employes to enter the street first, jumped into their car, and ordered Miss Harris and Daub to stand on the running boards.

Two miles from the city limits, they slowed down and told their captives to jump off. Miss Harris fainted as help arrived.

R. S. Powley, bank cashier, received a flesh wound from a bullet which was deflected by a suspender buckle. Two citizens, Ed Walters and Robert G. Shields, were wounded slightly in the legs.

Man Who Revived Dead Dog Evicted From Laboratory

Berkeley, Calif., May 3 (AP).—University of California authorities today officially notified Dr. Robert E. Cornish he must move soon from the old Anatomy Building on the campus where he has been conducting revivification experiments with a dog.

Dean Monroe Deutsch wrote to Dr. Cornish that he had shown "unwillingness to conform to the policy of the university's scientific staff," and added that "the use of the laboratory in investigations should be carried on quietly and unobtrusively."

Dr. Cornish said he had not received the note and declined comment.

Today is the twentieth since the dog was revived after being clinically dead four minutes.

3 Killed, 11 Hurt In Gas Explosion

Building Wrecked by Blast in Basement.

Louisville, Ky., May 3 (AP).—Three persons were killed and 11 injured today when gas in the basement of a garage and blacksmith shop exploded, demolishing the building and burying many of the victims in the debris.

The dead are Victor Koestel, owner of the shop; Henry Kuchenbrod, a mason contractor, and William Jecker, an automobile mechanic. The most seriously hurt were Mrs. Josie Holsclaw and Louis Kaelin, who suffered internal injuries.

The explosion caused a cave-in of the second floor, used as living quarters. Owen Carmon was blown through a second floor window, but was not seriously hurt and aided in the rescue work.

Bishop Wins; Ouster Loses By 269-170

Sharp Debate Precedes Ballot; Opponents Drop Fight.

Jackson, Miss., May 3 (AP).—A vigorous move in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South to relegate militant Bishop James Cannon, jr., to a sideline position in church affairs by divesting him of his status as an active bishop, was smashed today under a 269 to 170 vote of confidence accorded the churchman in the quadrennial general conference.

While the veteran of innumerable public battles in behalf of prohibition sat silent and immobile on the rostrum among his fellow bishops, his friends and supporters on the conference floor forced the issue of his continued service in a tense two-hour debate and at the end scored victory over the Cannon retirement bloc.

Ordered Listed for Duty.

By the 269 to 170 division, the conference overrode a recommendation of its episcopacy committee and ordered Bishop Cannon's name listed with the ten other living bishops of the church for active reassignment of duties for another four years. Bishop Cannon automatically will retire under the 72-year age-rule in 1938.

Churchmen who led the fight to retire him at this time, one week after his acquittal in Washington on charges of conspiracy to violate the Federal corrupt practices act, conceded at the end of today's conference session that they had been definitely defeated and said the Cannon retirement issue would not be pushed again at this conference.

Bishop Smiles at Vote.

The 69-year-old bishop, his sharply-etched face a mask behind rimless spectacles, sat at ease in his tall-backed Episcopal chair and listened without emotion as his opponents described him as "infirm of mind" and his supporters pictured him a martyr, persecuted by the forces against which he has waged battle for so many years.

Only when the ballot was tabulated in his favor by a 99-vote majority did he smile, and then he smiled broadly. Asked for comment, he would only say:

"The conference has spoken. It was their business."

Paper Prices Up, Now Your Dollar's A Bit Better Off

If the price of paper continues to rise, the paper bill of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will be so large the greenback problem will be solved, a Treasury official said facetiously yesterday.

In a more serious vein, he voiced concern over a sharp advance in the market value of "dollar bills in the rough." Even Congress took cognizance of the situation by lifting a limit of 32½ cents a pound on the sum to be paid for the material.

The problem will come to a head when the Treasury buys its annual paper supply around July 1. Officials made plain there would be no reduction of the grade for fear of counterfeiting.

Experts explained the paper required is made according to Treasury specifications under a secret formula. The material has a large linen content and is subjected to chemical tests before accepted.

Gallinger Prison Fugitive Captured

Twenty-four hours after he escaped Gallinger Hospital by hobbling out on crutches, Bernard L. Downey, Lorton convict, was found hiding beneath a bed in the 1400 block of T street southeast yesterday.

The capture was made by Detective Sergt. Frank M. Alligood, who ferreted out his man after running down several unproductive tips.

Downey, serving a 12-year sentence for robbery, was transferred to the surgical ward at Gallinger Tuesday for sinus treatment. Termed a "model prisoner" by authorities, he had given his word not to attempt escape. Left unguarded, he walked out during the supper hour Wednesday.

Restriction on Business Under New Deal Flayed By U.S. Chamber Heads

Woodin, Former Head Of Treasury, Is Dead

End Comes Suddenly as He Loses Fight on Old Ailment.

William Hartman Woodin, whose cheery humor heartened millions during the banking crisis last spring, died at 6:15 o'clock last night in a New York hospital after a fruitless fight against an illness that forced his resignation from the Roosevelt Cabinet.

Close friend of the President to the end, the diminutive former Secretary of the Treasury lapsed into a coma 10 hours before his death.

Word of Mr. Woodin's death came with shocking suddenness, since the Capital had become used to brief notices that he was recovering from the troublesome throat ailment that caused him to leave Washington for Arizona in quest of health.

More than a month ago he was able to return to New York, but on April 2 a hemorrhage of the throat sent him to the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, where he remained since. His death was officially ascribed to nephritis and uremia following infection of the throat and neck.

Britain Tells Japan Trade Must Be Cut

Retaliation Threatened to Halt Inroads in Dominions.

Developments yesterday in the Japanese political and economic situation:

London—Great Britain yesterday demanded that Japan restrict her textile exports or suffer trade reprisals.

Peiping—That Japan plans to invade southern China was charged last night by a Chinese government spokesman.

Paris—Japan was warned yesterday by France that China's trade doors must be left open.

London, May 3 (AP).—With threats of widespread retaliations and a possible open trade war, Great Britain today demanded a restriction in Japan's rapidly growing textile trade.

Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, placed before Japanese Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira a summary of the Japanese position and a list of projected curtailments of Japan's exports to crown colonies and the British Isles.

Politely, but firmly, Runciman warned Tokyo's envoy that the British government is taking general steps to halt Japanese competition, which is said virtually to be strangling the British textile industry, unless Japan agrees to modify her program, methods and tactics.

Mr. Matsudaira informed Mr. Runciman that he could not reply immediately, but had to consult his government first.

At a conference especially called by him, the board of trade executive explained to the Nipponese diplomat the situation in British colonies and the homeland, where lower-priced Japanese goods are sweeping the markets. Mr. Runciman endeavored to show the seriousness of the problem, and said he

Sanders Quits Post as G.O.P. Head June 5

Will Leave Post June 5; Chicago Meeting Is Annuonced.

By Raymond Clapper.

Everett Sanders announced his intention of resigning as chairman of the Republican National committee in a statement last night calling a special meeting of the National committee to meet in Chicago June 5 to select a successor.

He gave no reason, but he has been critically ill for several weeks and will be unable to devote himself to normal activities for some time. Furthermore, he has been the subject of much friction within the committee, which led to an organized movement to force his resignation some time ago.

His intention of retiring was exclusively disclosed by The Post April 25. It was stated at the time that Mr. Sanders was sounding out members of the committee as to the possibility of holding a special meeting in the near future.

Denial of The Post article was made the following day by Bennett Gordon, research director of the Republican National committee. He said he was speaking for Mr. Sanders, who at the time was seriously ill in a hospital.

Announcement of the impending resignation, which will take place as soon as a successor is selected, was the signal for revival of the battle over this key Republican position which has been waged under cover for some months.

It is uncertain at the moment who will succeed to the chairmanship. Strong sentiment exists within the National committee for Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News. He was approached on the matter some time ago, but flatly refused to consider it, feeling unable to spare the necessary time from his daily newspaper publishing duties. However, some of his friends are now suggesting that to meet this difficulty, the National committee headquarters be moved from Washington to Chicago with an executive lieutenant stationed on the job at Washington as a contact man here. This plan will be urged

Astor Blames Fiancee's Parents, Wants His $250,000 Ring Back

New York, May 3 (AP).—John Jacob Astor 3d, blamed parental interference today for the breaking of his engagement to Eileen Gillespie, of New York, three months ago, and told reporters the engagement ring, an heirloom valued at between $100,000 and $250,000, has not been returned to him and he wants it back.

Astor revealed the cause of the broken engagement on his return from a 'round-the-world cruise which he started immediately after the announcement that he and Miss Gillespie would not be married.

The 32-carat diamond engagement ring, Astor explained, was once the property of the Empress Eugenie. It was purchased by his father's mother after the collapse of the second empire when many of the French crown jewels were offered for sale.

"My father never used it," Astor said. "I inherited it from him. Now it's gone, but I hope it will be returned. When I gave Miss Gillespie the ring she was under 18 and her parents felt justified in taking care of her affairs. So they took the ring and placed it in a vault.

"I don't know the exact value of the ring. I took it to Cartier's to have it appraised, but they said they couldn't appraise it."

Astor blamed Miss Gillespie's parents for the ending of the engagement.

"They even wanted to come with us on the European honeymoon we were planing," he said. "That is going pretty far."

"The situation was confused," he added, "but it was she who broke the engagement. I was willing to marry her and, if I were to think about it, I might still be willing to marry her."

Astor said he had not heard from Miss Gillespie during the 88 days he was traveling around the world on a trip taken to "mend his heart."

Strawn Leads in Attack on Recovery Program at Convention.

President Hits Back at Critics

Harriman Denies Group Conceived Plan of NRA and AAA.

By Felix Bruner.

The Administration recovery program was subjected to such severe criticism at the United States Chamber of Commerce convention yesterday that President Roosevelt struck back with a warning against those who arouse "false fears."

In contrast to the talks at the opening sessions Thursday, when opinion on the New Deal was divided, more than a score of speakers yesterday were almost unanimous in their condemnation of Government restrictions affecting business.

Led by Silas Strawn, Chicago lawyer and business man and former president of the Chamber, who was one of the principal speakers at the morning session, the parade of criticism continued all day, concluding with that by Frederick M. Davenport, former Representative from New York, who was the last speaker on the evening program.

Declaring that the people as a whole will be impatient of those who complain and those who "hold out false fears," President Roosevelt struck back at his critics in the convention. The President's statement was read at the session last night.

The statement follows:

"Will you please convey to the members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States my very cordial greetings.

"Since your last session, widespread and significant improvement in our economic life has taken place. In the main, American business men have cooperated patriotically. I hope that increasingly intelligent cooperation between the Federal Government and the commercial interests of the country will stimulate the progress of our recovery.

"Congress has been and is doing its part and, within the next few weeks there is every probability that the legislative program for this session will be definitely completed.

"The Federal Government will continue its unceasing efforts to stimulate employment, increase American values and bring about a more wholesome condition. Private business can and must take up the slack.

"Your membership largely represents those interests which from motives of self interest as well as good citizenship have a leading role to play.

"The people as a whole will be impatient of those who complain and those who hold out false fears. It is time to stop crying 'wolf' and to cooperate in working for recovery and for the continued elimination of evil conditions of the past.

"I confidently count on the loy-

Naval Officer Dies of Poison

Lieut. Comdr. Houghton Found in Doctor's Office.

An emptied vial of quick-acting poison beside him, the body of Lieut. Comdr. James Edwin Houghton, Medical Corps, U. S. N., was found in a laboratory in the Medical Science Building, Eighteenth and I streets northwest, early last night.

A patient at the Naval Hospital for ten months, Lieut. Comdr. Houghton was being treated yesterday at the Medical Science Building when he walked into a laboratory and said: "I am tired."

Dr. Walton A. Bloedorn, of Clarendon, Va., offered a couch, according to police, and left the room for a quarter of an hour. Upon returning, Dr. Bloedorn told police he though Commander Houghton was sleeping until he noticed the empty bottle.

Commander Houghton, 43, lived in the 4800 block of Thirty-sixth street northwest. He is survived by his wife and two children.

A coroner's inquest will be held this morning and later the board of naval inquiry will meet.

Former War Secretaries Pay Tribute to Noted Fighter.

The note of the bugle sounding "taps" ended the services held yesterday in Arlington Cemetery for Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, picturesque Indian fighter and former Chief of Staff of the Army.

Two former Secretaries of War, Newton D. Baker and Henry L. Stimson, were among the mourners. Gen. John J. Pershing, who had been recommended by Gen. Scott as commander of the A. E. F., was kept away by illness.

Following services in Washington Cathedral with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, officiating, full military honors were accorded the former Chief of Staff with the firing of a 17-gun salute twice.

Hooded Horses Follows Caisson.

The caisson bearing the casket, followed by a black horse, hooded and with muffled hoofs, was escorted to the cemetery by members of the Third Cavalry, from Fort Myer. Entering the Fort Myer gate of the cemetery, the procession was accompanied to the grave by additional troops.

Among the honorary pallbearers were Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of The New York Times; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, present chief of taff; Maj. Gen. James F. McKinley, adjutant general; Dr. H. W. Dodd, president of Princeton University, and Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, president of Princeton Seminary.

Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commanding general of the Third Corps Area, was in charge of the military ries with troops from garrisons at Fort Myer, Fort Humphreys, and Fort Washington participating.

Died in 81st Year.

Gen. Scott died Monday at Walter Reed Hospital. He was in his eighty-first year. He was graduated from West Point in 1876 and almost immediately became prominent in Indian affairs. He was noted for his mastery of Indian sign language and wrote much Indian lore.

Much of the machinery for America's participation in the World War was set up by Gen. Scott, and despite his retirement for age in 1917, he continued to serve in France until the end of the war.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Merrill Scott; three daughters and a son.

British Tell Japan To Reduce Trade

hoped Japan would agree to negotiate quickly for a direct settlement.

It was reported that Britain is willing to compromise if Japan's reply is conciliatory.

A dispatch from Balboa, C. Z., last week quoted Panama merchants as saying they could not compete against Japanese goods and that tons of Japanese goods on the Balboa pier indicated that Japanese manufacturers were rapidly gaining South and Central American markets.

In a report of Harold P. Butler, director of the international labor conference at Geneva, these statements appeared: "Japanese industry has become the most formidable competitor in the world's markets; currency depreciation has reduced Japan's overhead and labor costs from one-half to two-thirds in relation to her main competitors."

It was understood that the proposed restrictions are ready for immediate announcement in case Japan does not agree.

These reins, it was reported, will take the form of import quotas and would necessarily apply to many nations, but would be aimed chiefly at Japan. The restrictions would not affect nations with which Britain has favored-country treaties.

Word Reaches Japan; Industrialists Roused

Tokyo, May 4 (Friday) (U.P.).—Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira in London has forwarded the foreign office a long report on his conversation with officials of the British Board of Trade regarding Anglo-Japanese trade competition, the Nippon Demp News Agency understood today.

The report may be considered at a skeleton meeting of the cabinet, possibly today, the agency said.

The agency quoted unnamed Japanese industrialists as noting the British move "to force Japan into world trade agreements" followed closely on "anti-Japanese agitation" resulting from Nippon's informal declaration of her paramount interests in eastern Asia.

It hinted broadly that the British government was taking advantage of the "present unfavorable light in which Japan has been placed" to force Tokyo to accept commercial arrangements which would not be to Japan's advantage.

Queen Shenandoah was attended by 29 princesses from nearby colleges, gowned in pink and green. Misses Elizabeth Rice and Virginia Cover Russell, Winchester, were maids of honor. Staunton Military Academy furnished a military escort and trumpeters who heralded the approach of the royal entourage to the throne. Royal anthems and spring songs were sung by the Glee Club of Harrisonburg State Teachers College and a dozen Handley High School girls in filmy costumes performed the "Dance of the Winds." Handley High School Cadet Band played the royal march.

Reds Refuse to Send Crown Gems to Chicago

Moscow, May 3 (AP).—The Soviet government today refused the request of the Chicago Century of Progress to send the Russian crown jewels there for exhibition this summer.

It was made clear that the bolshevik officials were unwilling to trust such historic valuables beyond the borders of Russia.

One Dead, 2 Held After Gun Battle

Missouri Officers Find Loot in Seized Car.

Cabool, Mo., May 3 (AP).—One man was dead tonight and another man and a woman in custody as the result of a 24-hour chase which ended in a gun battle in the wooded Texas County hills north of here late today.

The dead man was identified as Harry Williams, 30, of Evanston, Ill. Highway patrolmen expressed belief he is wanted in Illinois and Iowa for burglaries. A quantity of stolen merchandise was found in the Williams car.

Florence Williams, believed to be the dead man's wife and Walter Allen, 18, who said he is a hitchhiker picked up by the Williams couple, were jailed.

time, Commissioner Hazen said. While he favors the plan, he said, he does not believe that the power vesting legislation could be enacted at this session of Congress. He hopes to have this law passed at the next session, he said.

The Commissioners will pass on to the Public Utilities Commission the recommendation of the merchants' committee, that zones be established in each block to be used jointly as shipping points by all merchants in the respective block. Further action on this suggestion is expected next week.

Continuance of the parking ban was urged at the public hearing by Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who pointed out that the restriction had aided materially in the flow of traffic on congested arteries in the business area. Retention of the ban also was advocated by E. D. Merrill, president of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., and Melvin C. Sharpe, executive assistant to the president of the Capital Transit Co.

Plan Supported.

Support of the plan came from an unexpected source when George C. Graham, chairman of the streets and avenues committee of the Board of Trade, urged that it be continued during the experimental period of 30 days, expressing the belief that if the prohibition is abandoned at this time, that it will ultimately have to be invoked again.

Except for Mr. Graham's remarks, the trade bodies presented a united front in the fight against the restriction. The Merchants & Manufacturers Association, Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and the Seventh Street Business Men's Association presented a program for a one-hour parking rule in the area bounded by Fifth, Fifteenth and K streets and Pennsylvania avenue.

Speaking for the joint committee of merchants, Arthur J. Sundlun attacked the ban as discriminatory and presented a summary of questionaires sent to all tradesmen in the affected area, which, he said, demonstrated that the regulation was harmful to their trade.

His position was affirmed by Cecil Kaufman, president of the Seventh Street Business Men's Association, and Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Board of Trade.

brother, Alfred, who was four, and your sister, Theresa, who was three."

Ends in Police Station.

Hugenschmidt's search ended dramatically in police headquarters here yesterday when records revealed the whereabouts of his mother and her identity, which heretofore had been unknown to him.

The Hugenschmidt children were abducted by their father, Albert Hugenschmidt, once chef at the old Metropolitan Hotel. Albert Hugenschmidt was a dashing figure and he was attractive to many women, and altogether too much to one in particular.

So they eloped one night back in 1909, leaving the young mother alone. Hugenschmidt eluded the police, for officers everywhere had been instructed to keep a close lookout for him.

At Kansas City, Hugenschmidt's brother met the train and took Frankie from his father, so that the fugitives might escape detection. Then, when the trains were searched, Hugenschmidt would take one of the children to one end of the car, and the woman with whom he eloped would take the other. The lookout was for a man and a woman travelling with three children.

Boy Gets New Name.

Frankie's uncle had no children. He rechristened Frankie Gene, and brought him up to believe he was his son. Alfred and Theresa went with their father and his sweetheart, who posed as Mrs. Hugenschmidt, to Quincy, Ill.

Gene was sent to school in Kansas City. He learned to play the violin. His real father, whom he believed his uncle, died in 1925 and friends with whom Gene was living told him the truth.

From that day until yesterday, when he clasped his mother in his arms, he never ceased his search. Friends sent him a little money now and then, and he hitch-hiked. Dusty desert roads. Freight trains. Blind baggage. Buses. Hobo jungles. Finally Washington

Plans Family Reunion.

Somewhere out on the Pacific Coast is Albert Hugenschmidt, who also knows the truth about his mother. Gene is going to let him know the search ended successfully. He also will communicate with his sister in an effort to reunite his family.

"When we're all together, the years will slip away for mother," said Hugenschmidt yesterday. "She looks a generation younger today—almost like a bride."

When James Kidwell, Gene's stepfather, told Mrs. Kidwell she was going to see her son yesterday, she wept.

"Somehow for the last three days I've felt I was being haunted by a shadow," she sighed happily. "Now the shadow's come to life, and I have my boy back with me!"

Dillinger Hunt Extends South About Chicago

Bloodstained Car Found on North Side May Have Been "Planted."

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Chicago, May 3.—John Dillinger and his desperadoes are believed hiding south of this city, reliable sources informed the United Press tonight.

Despite a widespread man hunt on the North Side, secret agents are working on the South side and in Gary and Hammond, Ind., on the theory the bloodstained automobile found here yesterday was abandoned by someone other than Dillinger.

The North Side hunt, extending as far as the picturesque suburbs of Sauganash, was pushed by upward of 100 Federal agents, supported by Chicago's 8,000 policemen.

That Dillinger was somewhere in this territory was believed by officials because of the finding of an automobile the gang of fugitives stole April 23 at South St. Paul, Minn.

Secret belief was that after being wounded by officers in Wisconsin and Minnesota on April 22 and 23, Dillinger brought his gang to Chicago, dodged through police lines to the home of an ex-convict friend on the far South Side, across the Indiana line, in Hammond or Gary, and went into hiding pending recovery.

Then, officials reasoned, Dillinger probably feared the man hunt for him might be centered in the neighborhood where he was hiding so he used one of the foxy tricks for which he has become famous and hired some one to take the bullet-punctured, blood-stained automobile to the North Side.

Spain Plans Embargo On Wheat; Crop Heavy

was extremely fond of the President."

At the bedside to the end were Mrs. Woodin and other members of the family. His condition became critical the day before, but so accustomed were friends within the Administration to varying reports of his health that they found it hard to believe the frail little Secretary had finally lost his fight.

Kept Good Humor to End.

"To the end he remained cheerful, considerate and one of the loveliest patients I have ever had," declared Dr. Jerome Wagner, another of Mr. Woodin's physicians.

The former head of the Treasury had been urged many months before Mr. Roosevelt finally persuaded him to resign, to give up his work and attempt to regain his health. He stubbornly resisted, however, until the first of this year, when Mr. Roosevelt insisted.

Since that time he had been reported recovering at Tucson, Ariz., and then, on March 4—the anniversary of his administration—he was well enough to return to New York. Frequently during his illness he took occasion to laud the President and always to deny any disagreement over monetary policy.

To Mr. Woodin the President gave most credit for steering the Nation during the panicky bahking crisis. He was busy night and day, facing problems with gigantic implications, but the small, cheery industrial leader—a composer of music on the side—never changed the same, almost carefree front.

Cheery in Bank Crisis.

Friends ascribe much of the success of the Administration in the dark days of the bank holiday to the cheery disposition of the Secretary, whose smiling figure reassured millions of depositors from the Nation's front pages. It was his underlying faith in this country that did much to fortify the disheartened multitudes.

Mr. Woodin would have been 66 years of age on May 28. He was the second member of the original Cabinet selected by Roosevelt to die. The first was former Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who succumbed en route to the inauguration after a wedding trip to Cuba.

Although Mr. Woodin was president of the American Car & Foundry Co., he was known equally as well as a composer who liked to play the guitar in bed. Newspapermen recall that when rumors were flying he intended to resign he summoned them to his sick room, lined them up against the wall and entertained them for half an hour with his guitar.

Little in Public Eye.

Mr. Woodin was little known to the general public when he was selected as Secretary of the Treasury at the start of the Democratic Administration, according to the Associated Press.

But while listing himself as a Republican, he had given staunch support to the Democratic National tickets of 1928 and 1932, contributing $25,000 to Alfred E. Smith's campaign and later being treasurer of a special committee set up to wipe out a deficit of $783,000 in the party treasury.

Before becoming Secretary of the Treasury his only public post had been State fuel director of New York. He was appointed to that place by Gov. Nathan Miller and controlled the price and distribution of fuel in the entire State throughout the shortage that prevailed in the winter of 1922.

First Job at 90 Cents a Day.

His business carreer began with a job at 90 cents a day in the foundry of Jackson & Woodin, a railroad equipment firm which his grandfather helped to found, and of which his father was president. Later this concern was absorbed by the American Car & Foundry Co., and in 1922 be became president of the big corporation.

He also served as president of the American Car & Foundry Securities Corporation and of the same concern's export company. He was chairman of the boards of the American Locomotive Co., the American Car & Foundry Motors Co., the J. B. Brill Co., the Railway Steel Spring Co. and the Montreal Locomotive Works.

He held directorates with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the Remington Arms Co., the Super Heater Co., Cuba Co., Cuba Railroad, Compania Cubana Consolidated Railroads of Cuba, American Ship & Commerce Co., Atlantic Mail Corporation and the American Surety Co., besides places on the boards of several real estate companies and banks in New York.

Music Won High Praise.

Despite the size and varied scope of his business interests, he found leisure to compose music that was played by some of the leading orchestras of the world. His "Oriental Suite" was given by the Philharmonic Orchestra of Berlin; the Manhattan Symphony, of New York, in January, 1932, played a group of his compositions made up of "Chinese Magic," "The Unknown Soldier," "Souvenir de Montmartre" and "Tartar Dance," which won priase from critics.

He put out a book of children's songs and several miscellaneous compositions, including "Covered Wagon Suite," "Gypsy Love Song," "Rose of Seville," and "Pense Sentimental." He wrote the "Franklin D. Roosevelt March," which was played by service bands in the inauguration parade of March 4, 1933.

He described himself as a melodist, because he lacked the technique to orchestrate his compositions. In fact, he picked out most of his musical thoughts on a guitar, while propped up in bed.

Woodin was born in Berwick, Pa., May 27, 1868, the son of Clemuel Ricketts Woodin and Mary Dickerman Woodin. He had his preparatory instruction at the Woodridge School in New York, then wanted to study medicine, but his father sent him instead to the School of Mines of Columbia University, where he was a member of the class of 1890.

Marriage Ended Student Career.

His marriage on October 9, 1889, to Miss Jessup, of Montrose, Pa., ended his student days. Four children were born to them, a son, William, and three daughters, Mary, Anne and Elizabeth.

The 90 cents a day job, which was Woodin's first, was as a cleaner of castings in the foundry of the family's company. Sticking to what he later admitted was distasteful work, he became a molder, then expert foundryman, machinist, superintendent of the foundries and general superintendent of the company.

Having attained that post, he resigned and made a leisurely tour of Europe and the Near East, stopping to study music a bit in Paris, Vienna and Berlin.

Returning home, he plunged back into business, but this time in the white collar divisions of the American Car & Foundry Co., with which the Woodin plants had been merged. Starting in 1899 as a district manager of the big corporation, he was called to New York in less than a year to become assistant to the first vice president. In another year he was assistant to the president, and in 1902 a director. With his later rise to the presidency he collected his other industrial posts.

Late Sometimes at Meetings.

He was apt to be late to some of his board meetings if he got on the subject of music. His public in that realm knew him as "Will Woodin," his career there dating only from 1929.

Aside from his brief glimpse into the realm of the muse on his European tour, his formal musical education ceased when he was 7 years old. At that time his piano teacher gave up in disgust because the boy would not practice the notes set before him, going instead into improvisations. His parents refused to hire another teacher unless he would promise to follow directions.

So he started experimenting with various instruments until he learned to get melodies out of them. He liked the guitar best because he could play it while propped up in bed. He called this pastime "resting."

His serious compositions began when he was past 60 because a musician told him he had real talent. Woodin went back into memory and pulled out old tunes; the musician orchestrated them.

Collected Cruickshank.

Another thing that would take his mind off business was a tip as to where he might find a book with drawings by Cruikshank. He had a notable collection of that artist's works. He also went in for fine hand bindings on books and for rare coins. This last hobby led him to take an active part in the American Numismatic Association and in the Numismatic Club of New York.

Physically and mentally Woodin was the opposite of the popular conception of the energetic man of affairs. He was slender, had light hair and looked at the world through mild eyes that smiled quietly.

He believed in self-control and practiced it. Always he was calm, seldom ruffled, and he had a gift of patience that made him a true fisherman. Angling, indeed, was his favorite outdoor pastime. His home, just off Fifth avenue on East Sixty-seventh street, New York, was only a block or two away from that of President Roosevelt. The two shared interest in the curative properties of Warm Springs, Ga., and Woodin was a trustee of the Warm Springs Foundation which Roosevelt was instrumental in forming.

Faced Criticism at Crisis.

The first act of the Roosevelt Administration was to declare a National banking holiday, which closed all financial institutions in the country for ten days and, then allowed them to reopen only under regulations which the Treasury Department was charged with enforcing. The crisis involved the issuing of millions of new currency in Federal Reserve Bank notes, classification of the closed banks according to liquidity of assets and a tremendous amount of other detail work for the new Secretary.

Million PWA Funds Allotted Housing Plan

Ickes Declares Grant Is Preliminary to Insure Speedy Start.

The Administration's huge home modernization and construction program moved a step closer to reality yesterday when the Public Works Administration allotted $1,000,000 for administrative expenses of the drive.

At the same time, other details of the plan were being ironed out at a White House conference.

Secretary Ickes, in announcing the PWA allotment, said he understood it was merely a preliminary grant. He said the President wanted the money as a first installment, and that probably more would be allotted later.

Features of the legislation to permit limited Government guarantee of private loans for home repair and insurance of loans for new construction were discussed by President Roosevelt with leaders at the White House. Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, declared after the conference the Government's liability under the program would be limited to $200,000,000.

Program Has Two Phases.

The program will be divided into two phases of government aid. One will be a partial guarantee of private loans for repairs and home modernizing. The other involves insurance of long-time financing for building new homes.

Senator Robinson emphasized that no loans would be made by the Government, but that contingent liability would be created. Guarantee of repair and improvement loans would be limited to "about 20 per cent," he said. The program for new building, he added, "is more complicated. It contemplates a form of insurance, the premium to be paid by the borrowers."

Others attending the meeting, at which the legislation to be forwarded to Congress within the next few days was drafted, included Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee; Frank C. Walker, head of the National Emergency Council, which is promoting the program; John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and Marriner S. Eccles, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Robinson Explains Plan.

Explaining the Government's share in financing, Senator Robinson asserted the "plan contemplates a process by which expenditures may be financed from private sources rather than Government agencies." Back of the program is President Roosevelt's desire to stimulate the use of deposits lying idle in banks and to accelerate recovery in the building industry, besides improving American housing.

It was understood last night that the insurance of long-time loans for new construction would be in charge of the Home Loan Bank Board. Premiums of possibly 1 per cent would be paid into an insurance fund, which would back the individual loans.

Hopkins May Direct.

How large the loans for either phase might be was not indicated yesterday. It was conceded, however, that if a serious effort is undertaken to allow citizens to borrow enough to build new homes, the loans will have to be substantial.

Final details on the program are expected to be announced within a few days. The program probably will be in the hands of a new agency, to be set up by the National Emergency Council and likely headed by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, who will direct the popularization of the scheme and its relief-employment features.

Stock Control Bill's Passage Likely Today

House Passes 17 Sections as "Chiseling" Charges Enliven Debate.

By Robert C. Albright.

With 45 per cent margin requirements still intact, stock market control legislation yesterday survived its first severe test in the House, as charges of "chiseling" and "cracking down" enlivened debate in the chamber.

Rapidly thrusting aside all but Interstate Commerce Committee amendments, the House approved 17 sections of the bill in quick succession, after Chairman Sam Rayburn denounced charges of radical authorship as so much "stuff."

A final vote on the measure was in prospect late today, with passage apparently assured.

In another brush with Representative Fred Britten, Illinois Republican, who repeatedly asserted that "young boys" inhabiting "the little red house in Georgetown," wrote nearly every word of the bill, Rayburn alleged efforts "to chisel and defeat stock exchange legislation."

Lawyers Defended.

"I thought that yesterday we had enough of this 'little red house' stuff; and it is stuff," he said.

He defended Benjamin Cohen and Thomas Corcoran, Government lawyers who helped draft the bill, as "two of the ablest young men that it has ever been my privilege to know," then added:

"They are held up by men who are really opposed to this bill, but are not going to have the 'guts' to vote against it when the roll is called, as being somebody from Russia, or being tained with Socialism or Communism."

Britten was not slow to reply. Facing the gallery where Cohen and Corcoran have been watching proceedings, he reiterated the bill was written by "a couple of young baby faces," who 'might have an ax to grind," then turned on Rayburn.

"I am sorry," he said, "that the chairman has seen fit to adopt the tactics of Gen. Hugh Johnson in 'cracking down' on members of Congress by branding their amendments as 'chiseling'."

Shouting for recognition, a score of Democrats attempted to reply.

Representatives William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, and Alfred L. Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, got the floor.

"The thing that has touched the sensitive nerve of the gentleman," Bankhead said, "is that these young men are so smart; that they have brains enough to put their hands on nefarious practices of the New York Stock Exchange."

Britten said he had "no complaint against them."

"One of them can tickle the piano like nobody's business," he said. "Undoubtedly they are good boys—but they are just boys, inexperienced in legislation."

The first real test on the bill came when Representative Edward A. Kenney (Democrat), New Jersey, offered an amendment to reduce the flexible margin provision in the bill from 45 to 40 per cent. Rayburn referred to it as "the first chiseling amendment." It was shouted down on a voice vote. A dozen other amendments offered by members shared the same fate.

Only one of the four amendments agreed to was sponsored by an individual, Representative Edward W. Goss (Republican), Connecticut, and the committee threw its support behind this.

It provided that the so-called "anti-Wiggin" section of the bill should not apply if security registration was obtained without the consent of the issuer.

Just Pals!

But One Gets Jail in Ax and Knife Set-to.

Knives flashed, bricks flew and even an ax or two entered into the discussion, but "Tom Cat" Perry and John Davis, colored pals, insisted it was just in fun.

"Tom Cat," better known as William Perry, 34, of the 700 block of Ninth street northwest, arraigned on assault charges before Judge Ralph Given in Police Court yesterday, said he was "just playing" when he sent David to Emergency Hospital with a deep cut in the side.

"Sure, your honor, we was just playing," Davis agreed. "Why, me and 'Tom Cat' is buddies."

"I suppose Perry had the knife to manicure his finger nails," Judge Given remarked.

"I guess that was it," Davis agreed.

"Tom Cat" went to jail for 60 days.

Beg Your Pardon.

In a Police Court item Saturday morning The Post inadvertently gave the address of Charles Pinkert, who was fined $100 on a charge of drunkenness, as 2319 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. This address was the one given police, but Pinkert does not reside there. The Post regrets the error.

U. S. Smiles at Trade War

British-Japanese Conflict Would Mean Profit for American Cotton Growers; New Tariff May Counteract Latin-American Losses.

An Anglo-Japanese trade war, while it lasts, is all to the good so far as this country is concerned, it was indicated in official circles yesterday.

They take the position that regardless of which power comes off with the honors, since the fighting is primarily in the field of cotton textiles and the United States is the chief source of raw cotton, America's cotton farmers can smile.

No sign of intention to join in the struggle was evinced, however. Although American interests have been increasingly concerned of late over Japanese inroads into Latin-American markets, a trade war with Japan is not contemplated.

Later, when the new tariff bill has been passed and become operative, it may be possible to counteract this trend by reciprocal agreements with neighboring countries to the south.

Department of Commerce figures show sales of Japanese cotton goods gained 105 per cent in Latin America last year while American sales lost 10 per cent. In volume, the United States is still way ahead.

The fact that Britain has found it necessary to call Japan's attention officially to trade conditions is not found surprising here, where it has long been a commonplace that Japanese "dumping" of textiles and other manufactured products into British dominions at prices impossible to meet was growing rapidly.

Officials here described Japanese dumping in the United States as irritating rather than important. It revolves around such articles as matches, tennis shoes, cotton rugs and novelties. The volume, it is said, is not great.

Basically American trade with Japan has a complementary character. This country takes, even in such a year as 1933, over $100,000,000 worth of Japanese silk and sells Japan some $90,000,000 of raw cotton.

Reason House Sees Red Now Comes to Light

That Carnation and Necktie Have Histories, Two Members Reveal.

The House of Representatives has been seeing red spots all session.

Day in and day out Representative Sirovich, Tammany Democrat, has appeared with a red carnation in his button hole, the Associated Press observes. Just as faithfully, Representative Wearin, Iowa farm-boy Democrat, has worn a bright red necktie.

And here are the reasons why:

Sirovich — "Twenty-seven years ago when I first started practicing medicine, I helped an old Quaker charwoman who broke her hip when she was 78 or 79.

"In the hospital, she insisted God had been good to her and when she gave me a little red flower she asked me never to forget that no matter how bad things were they could be worse.

"I've worn a red carnation every day since then. It gives me that old fighting spirit, that never-say-die spirit."

Wearin—"When I was elected to the Iowa State Legislature in 1928, I was the youngest member. Old man Berry was the oldest. He always wore a red necktie. He used to warn me that I was just a kid and that if I didn't behave myself, he would spank me.

"On his birthday, I was designated to give him a red necktie at a celebration. I wore one myself. And I have ever since.

"It's a nice, lively color, and a touch of color often makes you feel as sure of yourself as a woman with a new dress. Besides, I like red."

Ickes Reports District PWA Funds Lacking

Secretary Says New Grant Necessary if $20,000,000 Measure Passes.

Extreme haste to get the District's $20,000,000 public works bill through Congress appeared a race to a dry well yesterday when Secretary Ickes disclosed that even though the measure be approved, there are no funds available for a District program.

The Public Works Administrator said that it is "decidedly thte case" that there are no funds left in his treasury to undertake work. Any funds for the District, he emphasized, can be granted only if there is an additional appropriation for the Administration's PWA program.

This disclosure came as Chairman Norton of the House District Committee announced she would appear before the rules committee otday to ask for a rule insuring early consideration of the measure.

The desire of Mrs. Norton and other backers of the District bill to get speed action has been actuated by a fear that prolonged delay or attachment of amendments to the bill, as it passed the senate, might block passage at this session.

Secretary Ickes yesterday again committed himself in favor of the sewage disposal plant project for the District as part of the program.

"The Potomac River ought to be cleaned out," he said. "I think it is a disgrace for the Nation's Capital to have an open sewer running through it.

"We ought to have that river available for fishing and bathing and boating, so that if you fell overboard, you wouldn5t be exposed to typhoid fever. I am heartily in favor of a sewer program."

'It's Outrageous Libel,' Declares Untermyer

New York, May 3 (AP).—Samuel Untermyer, noted attorney and Jewish leader, denounced today as "outrageous libel" the charge of the anti-Semetic weekly, the Stormer, in Berlin.

"This is the sort of outrageous libel that might be expected," said Untermyer. "Nothing seems too vile or false."

Untermyer has been active in promoting a boycott of German goods.

U.S. Spends $14,000 Per Minute, Day and Night, Last 10 Months

For Every Dollar Collected Government Has Put Out $2.34.

Uncle Sam has been passing out an average of $14,000 every 60 seconds, day and night, for the past ten months, according to the Associated Press.

Government spending for the first ten months of the present fiscal year has averaged $19,152,392.14 a day.

Against this expenditure it has collected a daily average of $8,184,154.89. This means that $10,968,237.25 of every day's expenditure is borrowed.

In other words, for every $1 collected the Government had spent $2.34 of which $1.28 went to emergency recovery expenditures.

Since last July 1 the Government expended in all about $5,822,427,211—a figure made up of $2,591,838,460 of routine running costs and $3,230,588,750 of emergency recovery spending. Receipts in the same period have been $2,487,983,087.

This leaves a deficit of $3,334,444,123. But only two months remain of the fiscal year and the Budget Bureau estimated a deficit of more than $7,000,000,000 by June 30.

Man Is Saved In River Leap

Ropes Break, Rescue Made by Boat; Victim in Gallinger.

Life-saving ropes broke, but John J. Burroughs, 30, of the 800 block of Sixth street northwest, was rescued from the Eastern Branch yesterday, according to police, after leaping 50 feet from Anacostia Bridge.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his condition was reported satisfactory, and removed to Gallinger Hospital. Police stated he had been unemployed for many months.

Two ropes were thrown him by W. S. Hall, bridge tender, who saw him plunge into the water. Both ropes broke when Hall attempted to drag him to safety, but Robert Duvall rowed out from an anchored barge and rescued Burroughs, police said.

$417,000,000 Revenue Bill To Roosevelt

Senate Rejects Couzens Amendment to Hike Income Taxes.

Only President Roosevelt's signature is necessary to make effective the $417,000,000 1934 revenue bill, which was finally approved by the Senate yesterday without the Couzens amendment, which would have required all Federal income taxpayers to add 10 per cent to the payment.

The bill as passed actually reduces Federal income taxes, which must be paid by the comparatively small wage earner, although it increases the taxes due from those whose incomes are in the higher brackets or who derive the major part of their income from dividends. Publicity of income tax returns is a major feature of the measure.

Substanially increased rates on gifts and estates also are imposed by the bill, which was designed to plug up loopholes through which wealthy persons legally are avoiding tax payments. In this connection the bill strikes hard at personal holding companies, described by the Finance Committee as "incorporated pocketbooks."

No Recorded Vote.

In adopting the conference report on the bill and rejecting the Couzens amendment, already voted down by the House, the Senate acted without record votes and with little debate. Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, said he would not push insistence on his amendment, since the Senate had gained so much in the conference report.

But he said he wished to say a few words about the publicity given his proposal. He said that "when any of us plead for the under dog, we are called demegogues" and he went on to describe the "demegogic party" projected by the Hearst newspapers, comprising all those who voted for the Couzens amendment. Those listed were described by the Hearst newspapers as "headed for the discard." After Couzens read the list Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, said his name was not on the list and that he had voted for the Couzens proposal and would like to be included.

Couzens asailed the Harst newspapers for what he said was their "vicious" attitude toward his proposal and as promoting "yellow journalism." He congratulated Congress on resisting the Hearst proposals for a sales tax.

Tydings Scores Bill.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, urged rejection of the conference report because the bill still contained a tax on Philippine Island cocoanut oil and copra. This provision would tax cocoanut and sesame oils from the Philippines at 3 cents a pound and the same oils from other parts of the world at 5 cents a pound.

When the Senate originally approved this part of the bill, Administration leaders suggested that because of it President Roosevelt might veto the bill. Few thought yesterday there was any possibility of a veto on this ground. It was understood that a plain is being formulated to speed up Philippine independence.

Sanders Quits Committee Job In Next Month

Announcement Bears Out Prediction of Post; Meeting Called.

upon Col. Knox in an effort to get him to reconsider, The Post is informed.

Position Is Strategic.

Those favoring him say that the energetic colonel, one of the most robust survivors of the 1912 Roosevelt Bull Moose movement, is the best man in sight to undertake the stupendous task of rejuvenating the Republican National organization and pulling it together after the wreckage of 1932.

He is pegged in the Middle West, which is necessarily the main point of the party's attack. In recent months he has taken an aggressive position against the Roosevelt recovery program, particularly "crackdown" aspects of NRA, a circumstance which might or might not be advantageous, depending upon whether the Republican Party finally shakes down into a straightout anti-New Deal position or decides to go moderately liberal and accept certain phases of the recovery program.

Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, sauve, silver-haired, former Ambassador to Italy and former member of the tariff commission, has some strong friends on the National committee and there has been considerable talk of him for the chairmanship. He has conservative Pennsylvania interests behind him, has not been entangled in factional fights within the party, and has contacts which would help the party treasury, but is somewhat short on actual political experience and acquaintance with the top sergeants of the party around the country. Whether he would consent to take the post is not yet clear.

Watson and Others Mentioned.

Former Senator James E. Watson has some strength and has been in close touch with the anti-Sanders forces. He and Sanders both come from Indiana, but that is about all they have in common.

There has been some mention of former Representative Fred Purnell, of Indiana, but he expects to run for Congress again this year and for that reason is practically scratched from the list. A good-natured, curly-haired scrapper, his old Republican friends in the House would be happy to see him in the party saddle.

A number of other names are being tossed into the hat. Theodore Roosevelt was recently sounded out on the chairmanship, but, after first pricking up his ears, he was told that it would estop him from any aspiration as a candidate himself for State or National office, and he lost interest.

Hilles and Roraback Important.

Betting on the sidelines is that when the old warhorse, Charles D. Hilles, New York committeeman, and J. Henry Roraback, of Connecticut, make up their minds, the chairmanship will be fairly well decided. Their friends deny, however, that there will be a slate and insist that the National committee will thresh it out at Chicago.

Mr. Sanders, who served as White House secretary to Calvin Coolidge after resigning as a member of the House from Indiana to take the place, returned to the practice of law in Washington and was snapped up by Mr. Hoover to manage the 1932 Presidential campaign.

His call, addressed last night to all members of the Republican National Committee, said:

"I have decided to tender my resignation as chairman of the Republican National Committee, to take effect upon the election of my successor.

Meeting Called June 5.

"I, therefore, in accordance with the rules adopted by the Republican National convention held in Chicago June, 1932, governing the procedure of the Republican National Committee, do hereby call a special meeting of the Republican National Committee for 10 o'clock a. m., Central standard time (11 o'clock, Chicago daylight saving time), Tuesday, June 5, 1934, at the Palmer House, Chicago, Ill.

"At that time, in addition to acting upon my resignation and the election of my successor, the committee will be called upon to fill vacancies on the committee for which nominations have been made, and to transact such other business as may come before it.

"Your presence is earnestly requested at this meeting, and I hope to receive early advice of your intention to attend."

Not Candidate, Says Watson.

Watson later told the Associated Press that he was not seeking the chairmanship, but would be willing as a matter of duty to answer the call if it should come.

"I am not seeking the chairmanship and in no sense am I a candidate for it," Watson said. "Under no circumstances will I campaign for it. If I took the place I would immediately tour the country and organize the party by bringing together the discordant elements."

Experiment Legislation Dollar Tinkering Under Fire.

Harriman In Denial.

During the afternoon Henry I. Harriman, president of the chamber, who yesterday made a speech friendly to the recovery program, issued a statement denying his organization conceived the plan of the NRA and the AAA. The statement that the two organizations had originated in the Chamber of Commerce was made in a speech in New York this week by Prof. Raymond Moley.

The Chamber, he said, takes public positions only through referenda of its members. He said the Chamber had expressed itself in favor of self-regulation of business by the adoption of codes of fair business practice, approved by the Government.

"There are other features of the recovery act which have not received the approval of the Chamber of Commerce," he said. "Therefore its approval is limited to those features of the act on which it has taken a definite position.

"The Chamber of Commerce has taken no position for or against the agricultural adjustment act."

"It is obvious," Strawn said, "that the greatest menace to the revival of normal business, not only in the United States, but throughout the world generally, is a lack of confidence. I trust I shall not be regarded as unpatriotic when I express the opinion that confidence will not be restored until there is a cessation of experimental legislation."

Requirements Listed.

Strawn listed the following as necessary requirements for a renewed market for business securities:

"1. Balancing the public budgets, Federal, State and municipal. The abandonment of spending our way to prosperity, and a return to strict economy, with extraordinary Federal expenditures confined to the unavoidable requirements of relief during the period of natural recovery.

"2. A definite announcement by the President that the emergency is over and that there will be no more requests for emergency legislation and no more tinkering with the dollar.

"3. A revision of the securities act which will permit the marketing of long-term securities and make possible a revival of the capital goods industries. The passage of a Federal stock exchange act which confines itself to the prevention of abuses of speculative practices and which shall not vest the management of the financial affairs of the issuers of securities in a governmental agency."

Strawn devoted much of his talk to the securities act, which he declared is preventing the flow of money into capital industries.

He declared also that the proposed stock exchange bill would "seriously affect the legitimate business of all members of stock exchanges and investment banks, with resultant disastrous consequences to the stock market; would greatly prejudice the interest of all investors; would tend to destroy the liquidity of bank loans and would impose upon the corporations of the country serious handicaps in the practical operation of their business."

Needs Summarized.

Included in a final summary of matters Strawn said were needed to restore business, were:

"Soundness of our currency and its anchorage to gold without fluctuation in its gold value.

"The maintenance of our National credit and the rejection of the idea that governments should be engaged to supplant rather than temporarily to supplement private credit.

"Recognition of the fact that we are part of the world and that a policy of intensive nationalism is wholly inconsistent with the welfare and development of American business."

W. Sanford Evans, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, told the same audience that if the United States dollar is taken "on any other excursions, whether hereabouts or thereabouts, we may have to attempt a constructive monetary policy of our own in self-defense."

Evans said Canada had made just as great strides toward recovery as the United States, although Canadian policies "have not constituted or been designed to constitute a governmental scheme of reconstruction."

"Canadian governments dispensed moderate doses of sustenance, but did not diagnose for, nor undertake, any kind of major operations," Evans said.

Blessing, Says McNutt.

"If, under these conditions, Canada did not sink deeper in the depression and has already recovered to substantially the same degree as the average of other countries, may there not be a suggestion that the forces everywhere have been more general and more powerful than those arising from the direct corrective actions of governments?"

Gov. Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, told the convention that he believed the depression had been a blessing in disguise to his State because it brought reorganization of the State government on a less expensive and more efficient basis.

"I do not trust that theory of explanation which imputes to American business leaders generally widespread misuse of power and lack of social conscience," Davenport told the delegates.

He said he believed American business men in their rush had not given time to the social consequences of what they were doing but that there are too many examples to the contrary to indicate a wide misuse of power.

"The changing order needs the whole-hearted sympathy and guidance of the American business man," he said. "Upon him depends whether we keep what we have, the ripe economic experience and skill of the past, or whether, like Russia, we repudiate and ostracize the business men and begin the industrial process all over again.

Uncomfortable Portent.

"One of the uncomfortable portents is the growth of an embargoistic nationalism among us. I mean a nationalism that would wall us off from the rest of the world in trade and commerce.

"Also there is a hot controversy going on among us about regimentation and freedom. We have been in some danger of a night-riding spirit of bureaucratic conformity, but we are getting over that. What do you think and what do I think and what do we all think is becoming again a matter of National concern. Nobody wants bureaucratic regimentation, but nobody wants private economic serfdom for workers and consumers either.

"The Government has its job to do, and the world is too young for business to go on its unbridled way. But we need have neither Governmental regimentation nor private surfdo mas a new, healing attitude of American business guides the economic organization of the country into production on a wide scale of life, liberty and happiness for all our people."

Publisher Hits Stock Bill, Securities Act

The securities act and the proposed stock exchange legislation are important contributory causes to the continued almost complete cessation of private investment, Malcolm Muir, president of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., told a United States Chamber of Commerce group yesterday.

Mr. Muir is a former NRA deputy administrator and while connected with the recovery administration was considered one of Administrator Johnson's chief lieutenants.

"As a condition necessary to attract investment," he said, "I should certainly include the modification of the securities act, because the public can invest in securities only when public offerings are made, and it is unlikely that it will get many such opportunities under the securities act in its present form. I would add to that a moderation of the terms of the proposed stock exchange act."

Muir also advocated direct Government loans to small industrial units that formerly secured their capital through loans from banks and not through sale of securities.

"It is also important that the overproduction bogey be squelched," he said. "If it isn't it will stand always as a barrier to investment in capital improvements.

"Another bogey that must go is the idea that profit, per se, is wrong. Widely publicized investigation of unfair profits has led to the notion popular in many quarters that all profit is tainted. The American Nation was built on the profit system and to remain the great Nation that it is, it must continue the profit system."

Ralph E. Flanders, president of the Jones & Lamson Machine Co., told the same group that "we have two things to do—rid ourselves of fear and rid ourselves of folly."

"Financial interests must refrain from building up top-heavy credit and speculative structures, and must be willing to look to true business service for their profit," he said.

Flanders said that while physical frontiers have disappeared there still are social frontiers in business and that one of these is the 40-hour week.

"It is going to take better machinery, better methods, better organizations than we have ever had to maintain that frontier position, and at the same time make that advance in the general standard of living which constitutes our other social frontier," he said.

Clausen Sees Peril In Government Cost

Warnings against increased financial obligations of the Federa Government and of local governments were sounded at the round table meeting on public expenditures in connection with the United States Chamber of Commerce convention yesterday.

"We are just beginning," Fred H. Clausen, president of the Van Brunt Manufacturing Co., Horicon, Wis., told the group, "to find out that the immense sums appropriated with such apparent ease and unconcern are piling up a load that will bear on the backs of man, woman and child even unto future generations."

Clausen presented figures to show the immense increases in Federal expenditures.

"Defeat of initiative and repression of courage come to the industrialist when the impost against any possible earnings is out of proportion when measured by the risk taken," he said.

He characterized the proposal of Senator Wagner to tax pay rolls as "legislative skulduggery."

Speaking of public debts, he said: "We can no longer ignore the approaching deadline. From their very size these debt burdens are projected into future decades. Cyclical depressions will come again and our reserve power will be done.

"Our obligation to our country today can not be met if we allow the burdens of the present to build up and then bear down the efforts of tomorrow to promote and restore economic prosperity."

Warning against too rapid increase in municipal expenditures was given by Henry F. Long, commissioner of corporations and taxation of the State of Massachusetts.

"It seems apparent that all must agree that municipalities should make a clear distinction between purposes for which it is legitimate to borrow and those purposes which are annually recurring and should be met by taxation," he said.

Henry Hart, vice president of the First of Michigan Corporation, discussed Federal financing in its relation to municipal financing. He suggested that municipal bonds held by the Government should be put in the hands of private investors as soon as possible, in order to maintain municipal credit.

Dr. McClure Defends Proposed Tariff Law

Proposed tariff legislation giving the President power to make reciprocal agreements was defended before a United States Chamber of Commerce group yesterday by Dr. Wallace McClure, assistant chief of the treaty division of the State Department.

"We believe the bill now before Congress is designed to meet some of our most pressing problems," he said. "It is designed to increase the international trade of the United States.

"The present bill accomplishes for the United States an overhauling of the machinery of Governmental usefulness so as to enable your Chief Executive to do what the executive authorities of the other important commercial countries of the world, by one method or another now in effect, accomplish. It undertakes to make your Governmental machinery for promoting commercial prosperity the equal of any such machinery that is at the disposal of any people."

James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trades Council and former president of the United States Steel Corporation, who presided at the group meeting, stressed the necessity for consulting industrial interests involved in the making of tariff agreements.

The theory that this country is self-sufficient is wrong, John G. Geddes, vice president of the National City Bank of Cleveland, told the group.

He said he would make no endeavor to forecast a revival of world trade and pointed to Governmental inconsistencies in this respect. Particularly he pointed to the fact that shortly after the United States recognized Russia the Johnson bill was passed forbidding loans in this country by nations that have defaulted their debts, thus upsetting, apparently, possibility of financing Russian trade.

C. G. Pfeiffer, president of the National Council of American Importers and Trades, said:

"When the tariff again comes up for legislative action, it is to be fervently hoped that the Congress will elect to confine itself to defining the guiding principles, and establishing the yardsticks by which the various factors it decides to be relevant in rate making are measured."

Commodity Speculation Upheld by 2 Speakers

Speculation in commodities was defended by two speakers at the United States Chamber of Commerce convention yesterday.

"The speculator performs an essential economic function akin to that of the insurance underwriter," said C. P. Ellis, jr., president of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange.

"In a well-organized futures market there is not a minute during a trading day when a price can not be quoted and a transaction quickly effected," he said. "This could not be the case without the speculator, who, when prices fluctuate, is ready to buy or sell at all stages of the movement, thereby preventing prices from going to extremes."

Thomas Y. Wickham, chairman of the grain committee on National affairs, said:

"Possibly no other factor contributed so much to expanding markets, to low distribution costs, and to the long rise in farm values in the half century following the Civil War as did speculation in farm commodities."

Discussing the recovery program, he said:

"Had I been charged with responsibility for the New Deal, I would not have turned to the brain trust, but to merchants, because the problem is not to evolve theories but to restore trade. I think the outstanding obstacle to world recovery today is interference with distribution. Everything that quickens the flow of goods increases the sum of human happiness and raises the standard of living everywhere."

Reduction of Farm Production Applauded

Reduction of farm production was applauded at a United States Chamber of Commerce meeting yesterday by Clifford V. Gregory, editor of the Prairie Farmer.

Agriculture, he said, has too much plant capacity and is trying to find a practical way to reduce that capacity. He said American farmers are tilling 50,000,000 acres for products for which there is no effective market.

"Farmers themselves," he said, "are thoroughly sold on the necessity of a considerable degree of National planning for agriculture, directed particularly to keeping production within bounds. They are not entirely satisfied with present plans. Their chief objection is that they are too complicated, particularly in diversified farming areas. In fact, no one has regarded present plans as anything more than temporary."

The speaker approved the plan of assessing processing taxes to pay for crop production.

John W. Rather, chairman of the board of the Institute of American Meat Packers, took an opposite view. He said the packing industry will turn over to the Government this year in processing taxes more than six times the profit of the entire industry last year.

Charles F. Whiting, president of the International Association of Milk Dealers, said the purpose of Government to restore to producers a proper balance of purchasing power has universal commendation.

Wilmott Asks For Dismisasl

Trial of Park Policeman on Assault Charge Goes on Today.

A motion to dismiss assault charges against Capitol Police Lieut. Alfred Wilmott followed testimony of nearly a dozen Government witnesses in Police Court yesterday.

Lieut. Wilmott is charged with assaulting George Smith, 23, unemployed jockey, during a street argument March 18. He was acquitted last month on charges of assaulting Smith's mother, Mrs. Elsie Jardine.

The dismissal motion was made by former Judge Michael M. Doyle, defense counsel. He contended the Government, in attempting to show Lieut. Wilmott was intoxicated, defeated its own case. If his client was intoxicated, Judge Doyle pointed out, he could not have had a guilty intent in the assault.

The alleged assault, witnesses declared, occurred near Smith's home in the 100 block of C street northwest. Judge Ralph Given, after hearing the dismissal motion, continued the case until 11 a. m. today.

Silverites Seek Vote in Senate With Filibuster

Long Talks Two Hours as Unexpected Action Is Launched.

kota, to grant farmers who are unable to arrange a conciliation with their creditors a virtual 6½-year moratorium. The latter has been offered as a rider to the corporate bankruptcy bill.

The impeuous Long, holding a thick Bible, from which he frequently quoted, declared that unless the proposed silver legislation were passed, all debts would have to be scaled down. He said he opposed that method of meeting the problem, preferring to give the people more money, thus raise prices, and permit debtors to pay their way out.

Long, his reddish hair awry, as he waved his arms like a preacher exhorting sinners to see the light, pleaded with the Senate to forget its loyalty to monetary orthodoxy and use silver to increase the currency, so the debt-burdened plowman would not lose his home and lands.

Thomas Joins Long.

Thomas joined Long in contending that the municipal bankruptcy bill passed several days ago, and the corporate batnkruptcy bill with the proposal to relieve farmers, weer the first steps in a Nation-wide repudiation of debts. Long argued the result would be that every one would have to go "through the wringer."

It first became apparent that Long was trying to prevent action on the Frazier atmendment when about 5 p. m. he asserted that all Senators should retire to their "place of abode" and quietly consider this problem. He said he had no intention of permitting a vote then. A recess was taken a few minutes later.

Subsequently, it was learned that Long, Thomas and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, had decided the time had come to force a showdown on the silver issue and to stop all legislative action until an agreement was reached for a vote on the monetary measure.

Earlier in the day Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, also an ardent silver advocate, flayed the Frazier proposal as unconstitutional, since it set aside contracts. Incidentally, Borah, Long and Thomas were among those who voted against the municipal bankruptcy bill.

Borah Assails Courts.

Borah sharply assailed the "emergency decisions of the Supreme Court, contending that if the courts could declare when an emergency exists the Government had become "a judicial oligarchy." He maintained that an emergency added nothing to the powers possessed by Congress and the States in the Constitution.

"I do not contend the Constitution is sacred," he asserted, speaking with a vigor that he has lacked in recent debates. "But I do hold the right to change the Constitution is sacred and belongs solely to the people. Our free institutions shall be destroyed if the Constitution can be changed by the courts, by implication or otherwise.

"Such a theory is to implant a doctrine in our Constitution that means the end of a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and means, instead, a government by courts and Congress.

Suspect Jailed In Bank Holdup

William Walker Arrested at Jersey City for D. C. Officials.

A suspected bank robber, sought by Washington police in connection with a $25,000 holdup of the Woodridge-Langton Savings & Commercial Bank in September, 1932, was arrested yesterday in Jersey City, N. J.

The prisoner said he was William Walker, 34. Authorities say he is also known as Henry Libby, Harry Watson, Harry Sloan and Harry Slattery. It was learned that New York police seek him in connection with a $4,000 pay roll robbery of the Tidewater Oil Co., Newton Creek, Long Island.

Notified of the man's arrest, Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, sent Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass to start extradition proceedings.

Buke said Walker is also wanted for an attempted robbery at the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank on Connecticut avenue northwest, in October, 1932.

Walker was arrested as a "suspicious character." His identity was learned here soon after the bank robbery and circulare for his arrest were distributed throughout the country.

Weir Launches Recreational Survey Here

Federal and D. C. Officials, Civic Leaders Tell Their Hopes.

The Capital's heralded recreation survey officially got under way yesterday when 30 Federal and District officials and civic leaders assembled at the Navy Building and told L. H. Weir what they hope will be accomplished.

Weir, who is 56 years old and a native of Indiana, has been field secretary of the National Recreation Association since 1910. He was borrowed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for the five or six weeks it will take to check Washington's recreational facilities and draw conclusions as to their coordination or unification.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the planning body, presided. After hearing the views of Elwood Street, Clarence Phelps Dodge, James G. Yaden and others, he named Commssioner George E. Allen, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and Director Arno B. Cammerer of the National Park Service on a steering committee to work with Weir.

Henry I. Quinn, of the Board of Education, strongly recommended that all playgrounds and recreation facilities in the city's schools be utilized after school hours. Representatives of the Federation of Civic Associations stressed the need of adequate grounds and equipment for colored children.

Dodge and Street represented the Community Chest and Yaden the Federation of Citizens Associations. Mrs. W. A. Roberts, Miss Edith Coulsen and Mrs. Wilson Compton spoke for the Council of Social Agencies, which suggested the survey several months ago.

Among the recreation leaders present were Miss Sibyl Baker, director of District playgrounds; Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center department; C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks; Capt. F. W. Hoover, manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association, and Winfree Johnson.

Dorsey W. Hyde and T. S. Settle represented the Chamber of Commerce, Miss Harlean James, the American Civic Association, and L. D. Degast, the executive council of Character Building Agencies. Commissioner Allen, unable to attend, was represented by Lieut. R. E. York.

Weir, who has conducted recreation surveys all over the Nation, believes every city should have one acre of park space to every 100 persons. He will have offices in the Navy Building with the Park and Planning Commission.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

ORGANIZATION of the sociological council, to reconcile and coordinate sociological objectives of various Government bureaus and offices, is suggested by Dr. Stuart A. Rice, assistant director of the Bureau of the Census. Dr. Rice made this proposal in an address on "The Opportunity for National Service by Washington Sociologists" at a conference of sociologists at 1640 Rhode Island avenue.

BAKER.

The formation of a Washington chapter of the American Sociological Society was discussed.

A committee, consisting of Prof. D. W. Willard, of George Washington University; Prof. Earl Bellman, University of Maryland, and Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, presented a constitution and plan for the new chapter.

Dr. Rice, who is a member of the Central Statistical Board and a past president of the American Statistical Association, in urging the establishment of the Washington chapter, said:

"Organized society, operating through the Government has never before in this country been called upon to face so many questions of social policy upon so many fronts. In the statistical field a similar problem led to the establishment of the Central Statistical Board, to plan and promote the coordination of statistical services.

"In the economic field the Government is constantly seeking to bring its various efforts to promote industrial revival into harmonious alignment. It should be the particular responsibility of sociologists, both within and without the Government, to further a like agreement in aims and a similar unification of effort among those agencies having to do with the social well-being of the American people."

Dr. E. W. Burgess, professor of sociology, University of Chicago, and president of the American Sociological Society, spoke on the "National Opportunity for Sociologists."

The Society of Federal Translators, Lodge No. 19, A. F. G. E., will meet Monday night at the Y. W. C. A. Building, Seventeenth and K streets northwest, Ignatius Jawney, secretary, Translating Bureau, State, announces.

Federal Attack Sped on Rum, Kidnap Gangs

Cummings Asks Fast Cars and Machine Guns for Clean-up.

Governmental warfare upon two of the most menacing and costly agencies of crime—kidnaping and bootlegging—was declared on two fronts yesterday, as Attorney General Cummings called for more men, money and machine guns, and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told of plans for putting down the illicit liquor traffic.

Denouncing public sympathy for criminals and laxity of certain law enforcement agencies as "disgraceful," Cummings announced he is seeking funds to reinforce Justice Department agents with swift, armored automobiles equipped with machine guns for the rounding up of desperadoes such as John Dillinger.

"Dillinger would have been caught in Wisconsin if the Department of Justice was modernized," the Attorney General declared.

He said he is calling upon Director of the Budget Douglas for an increase in appropriations to better equip the department and to provide for the addition of 270 men to the Division of Investigation.

U. S. Uses Outlaws' Guns.

Discovery that some machine guns on exhibition at the Department of Justice, taken from Harvey Bailey and Machine Gun Kelly, the Urschel kidnapers, had been removed for use by agents, led to the Attorney General's announcement of a more extensive and intensive war against crime.

Armored automobiles capable of 90 to 100 miles an hour, equipped with machine guns and two-way radios, will be bought by the Justice Department if the necessary funds are forthcoming. Cummings also has arranged to send a tentative bill to Congress, clearing up the legal rights of Justice Department agents to carry weapons, make arrests and serve warrants and subpenas.

Morgenthau yesterday announced the Treasury Department will be ready May 10 to take over the job of putting down bootlegging, recently a task of Justice Department agents.

Drive On Already.

"The campaign against bootlegging already is under way," he said. "Next Thursday we will assume the functions formerly carried out by the alcoholic beverage unit of the Department of Justice.

"We have been working hard to get ready for May 10. We have had people from this office studying the branch offices. I think we'll be ready."

The Treasury Department's force of "dry" agents will be doubled, Morgenthau said, and an effort will be made to determine whether the force now engaged in inspecting legitimate distilleries can be used in the new drive against bootleggers.

This combined force will be under the immediate direction of Arthur J. Mellott, a soft-spoken Kansas City lawyer and a "personal dry," who has been appointed deputy commissioner of internal revenue in charge of the newly created alcohol tax unit.

May Have Staff of 4,000.

Mellott's forces, which may number approximately 4,000, will work in twelve field districts similar to those of the present districts of the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol. They will cooperate with the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, whose director, Joseph H. Choate, jr., recently asserted that one-half the liquor consumed at present in this country is manufactured illegally.

It is estimated that approximately 100,000 illicit stills are in operation in the United States, ranging in capacity up to those of thousands of gallons.

"It's a big job," Mellott conceded yesterday, "but it won't be as hard as enforcing prohibition. This time we'll have the public with us."

Revenue Commissioner Helvering said $7,000,000 has been appropriated for the new alcohol tax unit, while Justice Department officials estimate the increased force and equipment asked by Cummings will cost $2,000,000.

Two Policemen At Trial Deny Extortion Plot

Woods and LeFoe Testify in Case Involving Alleged Bribe.

Henry L. Woods and John R. LeFoe, motorcycle policemen attached to the Traffic Bureau, yesterday denied on the witness stand in District Supreme Court, where they are being tried on a charge of extortion, that they accepted $10 from Wayne B. King, colored, to patch up a traffic charge against him.

Both men, now on a suspended basis, were arrested last November when officers of the Police Department allegedly watched a proceeding at Sherman avenue and Barry place northwest where the money was passed to LeFoe.

The money was found in LeFoe's glove when he was taken to the Eighth Precinct station house, it is charged.

Defense Attorneys Charles Ford and Joseph Kelly brought out from the officers that King suggested giving them some cigars because they had done him a favor. They established that King, instead of giving the cigars, handed money to LeFoe, telling him to get whatever brand he wished.

Assistant United States Attorney James R. Kirkland, prosecuting the case, produced Government witnesses who testified to watching King and the two officers. The case probably will go to the jury late today.

Wanderbirds Invade Virginia Sunday on Hike Up Dead Run

Dr. Stokes to Lead Foray Which Starts From Ingleside.

By Robert Shosteck.

Sunday the Wanderbirds Hiking Club, sponsored by The Washington Post, will take a 6-mile trip along Dead Run, in nearby Virginia. Club members and Post readers interested in this hike will meet at the Washington & Old Dominion Railway Station at Rosslyn, Va., in time to catch the 9:45 train to Great Falls, Va.

The round-trip ticket to Ingleside, the starting point of the hike, will be 23 cents. Those coming by automobile may reach Ingleside by driving out the Leesburg road to McLean, turning right on a dirt road at the railroad crossing, and driving about a quarter of a mile to Ingleside Station.

From Ingleside the club will follow a dirt road for about one-half a mile to Dead Run, following the run for about 1½ miles through a meadow, reaching a steep, rocky gorge. Here we encounter a series of very picturesque miniature waterfalls. The descent along this gorge is interesting for those who are reasonably sure-footed. The less nimble may follow the west bank, which affords a better passage. The gorge is considered one of the most attractive in the Potomac valley.

We reach the Potomac at a point opposite Plummer's Island, the wild life preserve maintained by the Biologists' Field Club. The group now follows the Potomac upstream about one-half mile, reaching a small stream which we follow on our return trip. Emerging from the woods, the hikers will skirt a plowed field and turn back toward Dead Run.

Not far below the Leesburg road crossing, the club turns up a lane on the right leading to a dairy farm. Following this lane, we reach the dirt road which takes us back to Ingleside Station.

Hikers are urged to wear low shoes and durable, not too new clothes. A water canteen likewise will come in handy, since there are few springs or wells along the route.

Dr. H. N. Stokes, who suggested this hike, informs us that we may expect to find an abundance of spring flowers, particularly at this time. The Jack-in-the-pulpit, bellflowers, Virginia bluebell, columbine, Dutchman's breeches and wild geranium abound. This hike should interest geologists too, since we find many forms of igneous rocks along the way.

Many Wanderbirds have asked about membership emblems. The attractive triangular emblem, depicting a sea gull in flight, over the letters W. B. will be sent all members early next week. A membership card will be mailed along with the emblem.

Dr. Stokes will lead the hike.

Belgians on Way Here to Tell Roosevelt a New King Reigns

Bent upon officially informing President Roosevelt that a new king has ascended the throne of the Belgians, four prominent subjects of the young monarch will arrive here the middle of this month to deliver the tidings.

It is, it appears, an old Belgian custom.

Couriers are dispatched to all sovereigns the moment the new king ascends the throne. This time, realizing that news of the crowning of Leopold III on February 23 must have leaked out, the picking of a suitable mission was decided upon and time was taken to that end.

Emile Francqui, Belgian's leading banker and the governor of the Societe Generale, the country's most important banking house, will head the mission. A trusted associate of his who has accompanied the banker on more than one decisive financial mission, Camille Gutt, will be in the party. Etienne Allard and Count Philippe d'Arschot complete the group.

Through the Belgian Ambassador in Washington, Paul May, the couriers have learned President Roosevelt will be happy to receive them and their good news.

They sail on the Olympic on May 9.

No special significance is attached to the predominantly financial character of the mission. Possibly, wags suggest, Belgium believes this country will feel most honored by a visit from bankers.

Pittsburgh Youth Free In Policeman's Death

Pittsburgh, May 3 (AP).—Nineteen-year-old Tom Davis was acquitted today of the murder of Herbert Brantlinger, a State highway patrolman.

Brantlinger was killed near Bridgeville, Pa., the night of September 3, last. The prosecution charged Davis shot him udring a holdup, but the defense contended the youth was home in bed at the time.

Baruch Urges Farmers' Aid

Bernard M. Baruch, financier and adsiver to Presidents, said yesterday in one of his rare interviews, according to the Associated Press, that solution of the farm problem is the key to economic recovery.

Recently a guest at the White House, the New Yorker indicated his belief that the farm problem will not be solved by cutting down production, but by increasing consumption at home and abroad.

"The first thing is to establish the buying powe of the farmer and the ownership of his farm. As soon as that is established many other problems will be solved. Without that, nothing will be solved," he said.

The Administration recently has shown a disposition to attack the farm problem through export aids and tariff agreements.

New Decision Affects Press Gallery Cards

Pending inquiry into the treatment of American newspaper correspondents assigned to foreign capitals, the standing committee of Correspondents of the Press Galleries of Congress yesterday unanmously decided to issue only temporary visitors' cards to new foreign applicants for admission to the galleries.

The ruling will in nowise affect the standing of foreign correspondents now members of the galleries.

The committee instructed its secretary, W. Turner Catledge, of the New York Times, to inquire of American correspondents abroad the nature and extent of press courtesies accorded to them, particularly as to the following points:

Facilities extended Americans in covering parliaments.

Opportunities and facilities for coverage of foreign offices and foreign office conferences.

Opportunities for Americans to attend such regular press conferences as are held with prime ministers, or heads of government.

Differences in facilities offered generally to national and foreign correspondents.

The standing committee of correspondents is elected biennially by the members of the Congressional press galleries and, pursuant to an act of Congress, have jurisdiction over those press galleries.

Foreign correspondents of American newspapers recently visiting here have complained of being denied regular seats in press galleries in parliamentary bodies and of being unable to get in direct contact with responsible officials in ministries of foreign affairs.

Largest Selling Scotch Whisky in the WORLD!

...Which is the largest selling Scotch Whisky in Scotland? White Horse! In Great Britain? In the United States? In the entire world? White Horse . . . Your first drink will tell you why. Experts—blindfolded—can usually identify White Horse from all others, so distinctive and superior are its taste, aroma and bouquet. Blended? Of course...it is a blend of many choice whiskies, first properly aged in sherry wood for many years. These are then blended...and again aged...to allow the whisky to become properly "married". Then once more blended...and again allowed to lie "in the wood". The result is White Horse, a spirit that is soft, smooth and very pleasing to the palate, "The largest selling Scotch Whisky in the world".

The Sooner The Better.

In his recent address to members of the Associated Press, Secretary Hull said: "If upon fair and searching examination some liberalization of the alleged drastic clauses in the securities act seems advisable, in my view affirmative action should be taken without delay."

This declaration, coupled with similar observations by other Administration leaders who are awake to the effect of this act in retarding recovery, has encouraged hope that the amendments necessary to insure workability would be made promptly. Not only is speed essential if the capital markets are to be reopened and employment stimulated, but the amendments themselves, to be effective, must be thoroughgoing. There is no need to delay legislative action in order to assemble more information in regard to the requirements of the situation. The inhibiting effect of the present law upon the flotation of new capital issues has been convincingly demonstrated.

It is now a month since Representative Rayburn asserted that the stagnation in investment markets is due to lack of investment demand. The counterblast to this assertion from those in position to know the facts has made it abundantly clear that the demand is there, but that it will not become effective until the necessary revisions in the securities act have been made.

Business would be encouraged to proceed with plans for future expansion if it were given positive assurance that the hampering features of the present law will really be eliminated. Tinkering with the act will not serve the purpose. It requires radical revision which can scarcely be expected if the legislative changes are made under the advice and with the consent of those responsible for framing the original measure. Every day's delay means a prolongation of the existing stagnation in the industries producing durable capital goods, and increases the danger of a business reaction which would result in forfeiture of the gains already achieved.

McLeod Bill Deserters.

In a last-minute effort to obtain the required number of signatures to a petition forcing a vote upon his bill to pay bank depositors in full, Representative McLeod has addressed a radio appeal to the Nation. Evidently he has given up hope of persuading his colleagues to sign unless they succumb to a bombardment of appeals from interested voters back home. The fact that nearly 50 signatures were still required at last report is heartening evidence that the Administration has been able to hold wavering groups in line for common sense and currency security.

It is encouraging that so many Congressmen are now showing conviction that it is wise to resist a demagogic appeal to subsidize several million depositors at public expense. They certainly need to make no excuses for refusing to append their names to a petition that would mean an expenditure of about $1,800,000,000 by the Government, with the possibility of subsequently recovering approximately $725,000,000. That is the official estimate of the cost of undertaking to pay all deposits of $2,500 or less in closed banks.

Not only would the losses be great but the legal obstacles to enforcing the provisions of the bill appear to be insuperable, to judge from the testimony of the Comptroller of the Currency. Apart from the financial burden and the administrative complications, this effort to make the Government responsible for losses suffered in individuals' dealings with privately owned banks can only be regarded as the most indefensible sort of raid upon the Treasury. It would constitute a dangerous precedent which no legislature can afford to establish.

Taxi Liability Insurance.

Indorsement by the Commissioners of a bill requiring taxicab owners in the District to acquire liability insurance should be followed by its early enactment. Legislation of this sort is advocated by the Public Utilities Commission, the American Automobile Association and many other bodies. It is based on the well-established principle that public carriers should be financially able to reimburse individuals who may sustain injuries or property damage because of carelessness on the part of such carriers.

Commissioner Allen's dissent from the action of the Board of Commissioners is not impressive. He fears that 1,000 taxi drivers might withdraw from business if required to make themselves financially responsible for the accidents they may cause. But cab drivers who can not be relied upon to compensate damages resulting from their negligence are a menace rather than an asset to the community.

Higher fares might be necessary under a compulsory insurance law. The public must expect to pay for the service it receives. Safety and responsibility are among the first requisites of a modern transportation system, and they ought not to be sacrificed, even for the sake of low fares. To permit drivers without insurance or other resources to operate cabs is palpably unfair to those carriers which make a practice of protecting the public against loss resulting from negligence.

Incidentally, reduction in the number of cruising taxicabs would do much to relieve present traffic congestion in the downtown area.

More Balanced Judgment.

The uncritical enthusiasm as well as the uncompromising hostility aroused by the National Recovery Act at the time of its passage has in the course of a few months given place to a sounder, more balanced, judgment of the defects and the merits of this controversial law.

Under the plea of emergency the work of codification has gone forward at such rapid pace that there has been little opportunity for constructive criticism to make itself heard. Now, however, there are encouraging indications that the representative business men of the country are ready to discuss the problems that confront them under the NRA without indulging in vague general denunciations or accepting extravagant hopes of an industrial millennium. After grappling with actual price and production control problems under the codes, it has become possible to weigh the benefits against the costs and to consider calmly the future of this emergency experiment in industrial regulation.

The addresses delivered before the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce this week have been notable for this new spirit of reasonableness and for their objective quality. They bring encouraging evidence that business has received some salutary lessons concerning both the difficulties and the limitations of industrial self-discipline. It is also encouraging to learn of General Johnson's conviction that the recovery act can not be enforced by invoking legal penalties and relying upon the police agencies of government.

The fact that both General Johnson and many leading industrialists alike believe that certain features of the recovery act will be embodied in permanent legislation does not imply that they look forward to any epoch-making alteration in our existing industrial structure. They merely conclude that those features of the code agreements which meet the test of serviceability are likely to survive by general consent. In the words of General Johnson, the future of industrial planning rests with industry and will depend upon what industry wants.

The notion that industry has been effectively organized for the first time under the NRA has been sedulously fostered by some of the ardent apostles of economic planning. That assumption was challenged by A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Company, who pointed out that "in a sense we have always had a planned economy." Moreover, planning under the codes has proceeded along familiar lines so far as endeavors have been confined to restrictions upon unfair competitive practices. The chief difference is that business men have not been hampered by legal obstacles as heretofore in effecting agreements.

Since the NRA has accorded industry various privileges that it has long sought to obtain, it seems highly probable that the present emergency law will be superseded by some permanent legislation to enable business to retain these particular benefits so far as they are advantageous to the community as a whole. In the opinion of Henry H. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, there is no reason why this should "mean an era of bureaucratic control." His widely shared hope is that we shall progress toward an "orderly economic freedom in which the industries themselves play their responsible part."

Where Expediency Fails.

The strikes in Washington bring directly before the Administration the result of an unrealistic attitude toward the reemployment of idle men. Labor organizations throughout the country are imbued with the idea that higher wages and shorter hours would bring about economic recovery, and that continued unemployment can best be countered by such policy. A large part of the strikes which break out intermittently in various sections have their origin in this belief.

Speaking at the conference of NRA code authorities nearly two months ago President Roosevelt said: "It is the immediate task of industry to reemploy more people at purchasing wages and to do it now. Only thus can we continue recovery and restore the balance we seek." This address was followed by more specific requests from Gen. Johnson as to the spreading of work and expansion of pay rolls. Some industries have responded. Others have found it impossible to advance their pay roll expenditures in advance of business improvement. But organized labor refuses to consider the problem from that angle.

A policy bristling with threats has been announced by President Green of the American Federation of Labor. Notwithstanding the practical difficulties which stand in the way of a general shortening of hours, he declares that "a concentrated drive should now be made to compel, through the use of forceful methods if necessary, an immediate reduction in the hours of labor."

It is not surprising that some unions are taking advantage of this situation to present unreasonable demands. Local carpenters are striking for an increase from $1 to $1.37½ per hour, in spite of the fact that unemployment in the building trades is widespread and high wages are one of the retarding factors. Senator Davis alleges that employes of contractors who are constructing Government buildings are being swindled. But that is another issue. If the law requiring the payment of prevailing wages on Government contract jobs is being evaded, prosecutions are in order. But these charges do not in any way justify unreasonable wage demands.

The President's labor policy was adopted when prices were expected to rise. Higher prices would make higher wages possible. But during the last two months the general trend of wholesale prices has been downward. In the light of this fact and the manifest inability of those industries in which unemployment is most widespread to increase their pay rolls before business improvement takes place, a more realistic wage policy can not indefinitely be deferred.

To Eliminate Quacks.

Use of political influence by lawyers practicing before the Government departments is still a local issue, even though the Administration's campaign in that field has quietly subsided. Local attorneys who are not affected by the vicissitudes of politics resent the indiscriminate manner in which charges have been hurled at the legal profession in Washington. It is they who are really carrying on the fight to have lobbyists, shysters, camp-followers and politicians put in their place.

Members of the bar point out that Washington is exposed to unusual abuses from would-be lawyers because any one is free to represent himself as an attorney qualified to give legal advice and to draw up legal documents. Of course, such practitioner may not represent a client before a court to which he has not been admitted as a member of the bar. But otherwise he may masquerade as a lawyer without legal hindrance. Examinations or licenses are required of doctors, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists, optometrists, accountants, nurses, architects &c., before they are allowed to practice their professions. Lawyers alone are strangely exempt from regulations of this sort.

A bill to protect the public against fake lawyers was introduced by Senator King in March, 1933. With several amendments, it was reported favorably by the Senate District Committee. It has the indorsement of the District Commissioners, the American Bar Association, the District Bar Association, the Federation of Citizens Associations and various other civic groups. But Congress has shown very little interest in the bill, and the Administration seems to have done nothing to encourage its enactment.

In the belief of many leaders of the District bar this measure would help to drive out of Washington the army of politicians, professional lobbyists and unscrupulous practitioners which here abounds. The bill is of course no cure-all for the "influence" racket, but it would undoubtedly put the practice of law in the Capital City on a higher plane. If the Administration is really interested in ousting the quacks who substitute political pull for knowledge of the law, this bill would afford a substantial basis for its campaign. But of course the whole problem of eliminating political pull from the Government service is extremely delicate so long as the chairman of the Democratic National Committee is retained as Postmaster General.

Crescendo.

In yesterday's paper were reported three occurrences which—while assuredly above suspicion of collusion—bear to one another a relationship of almost occult significance.

In the first place Dr. Henry Stack Sullivan, former psychoanalyst of St. Elizabeths Hospital, told the District Medical Society that every great metropolis, far from threatening its citizens' sanity, is an asylum where thousands can preserve a mental balance that they would lose amid the ennui of the farm or in the small town. He made this statement flatly, without reference to any manifestation of the A. A. A. to point the moral or adorn the tale.

At almost the moment of Dr. Sullivan's announcement, Dr. John Edward Lind, present psychiatrist of St. Elizabeths, was warning parents against introducing inferiority complexes into the heads of their offspring by giving them such fancy names as, for instance, "Percy."

And while these learned admonitions were echoing here, a judge in rural Pawhuska, Okla., was granting a divorce to George Thomas Gilcrease from the former Norma Smallwood, the "Miss America" of 1926, and assigning to the plaintiff the custody of this couple's 6-year-old child ycleped Des Cygnes L'Amour.

If Percy is in danger everywhere, and if thousands are in danger everywhere save in a big city, what—oh, what—are the psychic perils in store for little Love-of-Swans Gilcrease, of Pawhuska?

THE MONTANA, carrying the bodies of 17 Americans killed by Mexican snipers, passed out of the harbor of Vera Cruz on its way to New York. Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

This Is Swell!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several of us wondered the other morning, after reading Mr. Hall's excellent argument for cooperative planning, whether some of the gentlemen on The Post staff just couldn't stand it any more and were staging a little demonstration against your consistently reactionary editorial policies.

According to Mr. Bargeron's column this morning and the editorial entitled "Office Memorandum" that supposition is true, at least in regard to Mr. Hall. Much more power to him! No one objects to editorials about books. Write a lot of them if you like. But may we suggest that you give Hall an opportunity to write more editorials? It will be interesting to see whether he must accept the chastisement dealt him this morning by members of his own staff, and whether The Post, which has prated in the past about "freedom of the press" in connection with the newspaper code, will make sure, as usual, that the "freedom" of its columns is limited to a single point of view. It is a point of view at least five years behind the times, as Bargeron proved this morning and as he proves every day.

By the way, the argument Bargeron presents, that there has been planning since the foundation of the republic, is just the statement of fact which the members of the so-called "brains trust" have been trying to make clear. Perhaps there is yet hope for Bargeron, as soon as he rids his mind—or what he calls his mind—of the belief that the planning of 1929 was sound. Perhaps he will eventually realize that the great majority of Americans are not satisfied with that kind of planning. One hesitates to say that the "young liberals" on your staff have been suppressed up to this point. But it is to be hoped that they will be given complete freedom to express themselves from now on, if only to supply the editors with an education in the economics of the times. If you want to write editorials about books, please remember that some have been written since John Stuart Mill wrote his.

May Day in Franklin Square.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The May Day gathering of the Communists in Franklin Square was a rather drab affair. These followers of the Soviet Republic are not representative of the men and women who made America. Of the 25 or more, half were Negroes whom almost any one could feel sympathy for as individuals. Half of the whites apparently had little American background and the rest were nondescript. The two leaders were of the opinion that they and the Negroes with a few other "class conscious" men and women could have made a better form of government and, whether we like it or not, are going to give us a New Deal.

I often wonder why these dear people do not go to Russia in order to save themselves so much trouble—a nation of the kind they dream of is already established there.

Grounds for Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter written by "A She Smoker" makes me indignant. People may eat frogs, snakes, or anything else they prefer—it is not my business—but should they compel me to eat with them, then I have every right to object. Similarly, a person may smoke as much as he pleases, and I should not interfere or criticize. But when he forces me to indulge in a second-hand smoke, I have good reason to protest.

I have eaten in smoke-filled restaurants when I could scarcely taste my food; I have sat in a theater and inhaled strong tobacco smoke till I was actually nauseated; I have entered a room in evening dress exhaling a delicate perfume, and have come out reeking with tobacco smoke that clung to my clothes for days. Are these not sufficient grounds for complaint?

"For "A She Smoker" I have neither "laughter" nor "cuss words," but I am indeed sorry that she is evidently ignorant of the injurious effect of smoking on the health, else surely she would not inflict this public nuisance on others. May her smoke "curve and curl away"—far away from my nose. And may she not contaminate the air breathed by those who prefer it pure.

MURIEL SHAW.

To Arm or Not to Arm.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Kindly permit me to reply to Mr. Swiggett's letter of April 27. Federal Government control of firearms and the importation of the same would no doubt minimize, if not prevent, the many murders committed daily in this broad land, and avoid the very conditions mentioned by Mr. Swiggett toward which we are heading fast.

Our civilization, which has reached a high point and is a model for the rest of the world, is faced with the bare issue—disarm or arm. If the latter catastrophe should happen, society will not be as we know it today, and the monster Frankenstein will be ready to destroy his own creator. Personally, I hope I will not see the day when every home is a fortress and every automobile, airplane and pedestrian is a moving arsenal.

Emergency Relief Shake-Up.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I'm mighty glad to read about the emergency relief shake-up. It certainly needs a thorough investigation for the benefit of those who receive such nasty consideration or none at all. There has been too much partiality displayed by indifferent case workers to favored clients, while others in dire need are neglected for a considerable time or forgotten entirely.

Speaking about hundreds that don't want work, but feel the Government must take care of them forever, naturally they feel as they do when they have been given their portion and part of the other fellow's, too. I'm a mother with two babies and I'm hoping that better results might be derived by employing experienced and competent case workers who show no favoritism to greedy, undeserving clients. V. B.

Approves Emphatic Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For myself and for our corporation I want to congratulate The Washington Post management on certain articles in opposition to the New Deal. I refer particularly to the article appearing in this morning's paper by Mr. Raymond Clapper, to the articles that appear every day by Mr. Bargeron, and the financial articles written by Mr. Robey. These are the best things that I have seen anywhere setting out the fallacies and folly of the "brain trust" crowd and the managers of the present Administration.

You also have an exceedingly good editorial writer, who is the most capable man I have ever read in setting up emphatically his views, and I am glad to say that The Post has decided views on these things. I would like awfully well to see you follow up this line in your editorial columns quite regularly, as it is doing a lot of good for all business men and for the entire country.

A Brutal Act.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to call attention to the brutal killing of the little dog within the Soldiers' Home grounds on Monday. We who work so hard to instill kindness and fair play to animals, especially among children, are appalled at this example of extreme cruelty.

There are no gates to the "home" to keep dogs outside. Under these circumstances, surely the barbarous shooting of the little animal was without excuse. One of two things can be done when dogs and cats are running at large within the grounds: either they can be driven out or caught and confined in one of the buildings, until the Animal Rescue League, 71 O street northwest, phone North 5730, can be notified and can call for them. The Animal Rescue League returns many lost pets to their owners.

"When I Was a Boy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That article, "When I Was a Boy," in the magazine section of yesterday's Post, has filled my mind with a flood of recollections, because I am an old-timer, too.

It makes me squirm now to think of the torture I used to endure from that red-flannel underwear. I have helped my grandmother many a time make tallow candles, and my memory goes back to the camphene lamps which we used for a good while before kerosene lamps were heard of, at least in our part of the country.

I also listened to the long sermons back at a time when many believed that Hell (with a big capital H) was paved with the skulls of nonelect infants. I remember the cookie jar in the pantry, the bath in a washtub in the kitchen on Saturday night, the flatiron in a piece of an old blanket that kept my feet warm in bed in winter, the —but hold on—you have not asked me to write you my recollections, so I will sign off and wait for the next installment of "When I Was a Boy."

Loyalty to an Ideal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to say that your school essay contest has been very interesting. Especially, I should like to commend your inclusion of colored pupils, thus directing them toward the goal of their own Howard University.

As a Southern woman (whose ancestors were slave owners), I know that one of the finest traits of the Negro race is loyalty to an ideal. When a newspaper like The Post presents and encourages the ideal of civic betterment, intelligent study of government and responsibility to posterity, it performs a high patriotic duty. May it continue to improve future voters.

Washington Beauty Spots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think few of our Post readers realize all the beauties of Washington, foremost of which is the little plot of ground at the foot of the Capitol known as the home of the superintendent of the Botanical Gardens. The red, white and blue hyacinths blooming a month ago are now followed by the lovely red and white tulips and perennials. Just opposite the new Church of the Reformation being built at East Capitol street and the Congressional Library is another of Washington's beauty spots.

The Post Impressionist

Letters To The Editor.

Postoffice, Friday.

WE never see courage without desiring to emulate and surpass it. From this impulse has risen a friendly rivalry between ourselves and the Editor of The Post.

Excepting only the libelous and the unintelligible—no mean exceptions—he publishes nearly all the letters he receives. Whether they condemn, distort or praise the policy of the paper makes no difference. This requires more bravery than appears at first glance. But what requires still more courage is the publication of those letters which might so easily be written to an editor, yet which are not. We shall outdo our superior by fearlessly printing a few communications recently unsent to our own Column.

Sir: You treat with too much levity the recurring reports of strange sea-monsters seen in various parts of the globe. Such creatures are unusual only as to the unessential matter of size. Everybody has observed their like through the microscope, or in photographic enlargements of animalcules found in ordinary drinking-water. I am convinced that the greater creatures at which you scoff are simply overgrown bacteria.

Sir: May I enter a little plea for the introduction into diplomacy of a modicum of that politeness which is perhaps, in these days, erroneously called "common" courtesy? My thought is of that home of good manners, the Orient.

There is, I understand, unrest throughout the whole world because our New Deal will not recognize Japan's New Deal, as I call it, in Manchukuo. Is this lack of recognition kind? Manchukuo is young—and we ignore her. She is inexperienced—and we cut her. But would we behave thus in our own homes?

Diplomatists are gentlemen, in private. I assure you that they are: I have known several. Then why should they not bring to the practice of their profession that same gallantry which endears them to their many friends outside their calling?

I venture to urge, as something salutary for international Society, a trifle more of Lord Cavendish, a mite additional of Mrs. Emily Post.

Sir: I don't suppose any Column which prints a whole column in praise of beer-guzzling, which was what your wet column called "Bigger and Better Beer" was, no matter how you tried to hide behind dry statistics, will be fair-played enough so as to print anything on the other side, but are you aware how there are more liquor-sales-rooms now in this Capital of the Nation's business-dist. than in corresponding areas of similar dists. at New York City itself?

Perhaps you'll argue it ought to be, saying when the Nation was dry the Capital ought to have been the Nation's driest and was, so now it's wet the Capital ought to be its wettest and is. But do you honestly suppose our National lawmakers can make any more good laws like securities acts and so on if they're here far from their homes surrounded by a lot more temptations than they are there?

Sir: I see by your interesting paper that a California scientist is reported to have resuscitated a "dead" dog by offering him rations of liver-and-bacon, a dish of which he was specially fond. It may not be malapropos for me to narrate in this connection one of my own experiences.

I owned a collie, a charming fellow with a single sad fault. His previous owner had taught him to drink whisky, and "Sandy"—for such was his name—had become a drunkard. When he arrived at my Swiss home, where there was never any liquor, he was most discontented. He would run away to his earlier master and return in a shocking condition. Once a neighbor, entering his wine-closet for medicinal purposes, caught "Sandy" there: the poor dog had jumped through a window-pane. He was dripping from wounds, yet had drawn with his teeth the cork of a whisky demijohn, upset the vessel, and was lapping the outpouring liquor.

I brought "Sandy" to Washington a month before the District abandoned Prohibition, when there was of course no liquor to be had here for, as the saying goes, love or money; and my collie became a nervous wreck. He seemed to realize that legal liquor would be plentiful could he but wait for it, yet his undermined constitution was unable to endure the necessary delay. He died on the eve of the District's reversion, and I buried him in a shallow grave in our garden.

The next evening, after dark, a liquor-dealer's delivery man stopped at our house by mistake and began to carry a case of Scotch whisky toward our back-door. He stumbled, the case fell; several bottles broke, and an alcoholic puddle began to form at a spot perhaps three and a half feet from the canine grave. Well nigh instantly, the mound moved. Within 10.5 seconds—I timed it by the stop-watch I habitually carry—"Sandy" had reappeared and, without pausing even to shake the clay from his coat, was drinking that spilled Scotch.

Along the Potomac

With
Carlisle Bargeron

I KNOW of no better example of the power of our Government, of our 125,000,000 people when they grit their teeth, coordinate their purposes and set out toward one common accomplishment than their plan to prevent my young friend Joe from going to the circus this year. It proves to me more than anything else what planning can do, the results we can obtain by planning instead of going along in the old topsy-turvy way.

A lot of newspapermen must know the youngster. Joe is not his real name. He used to run messages for the Western Union office in the Press Building. A sunnier disposition, a more attractive personality in a youngster I doubt I have ever seen. There is no doubt in my mind that had the Government not intervened he would have some day been president of the Western Union or president of something.

BARGERON.

I frankly don't know why the Government, why our 125,000,000 people, got it in for Joe. It seems though that after years and years of researching and studying by our researchers and students it was discovered that what was wrong with our country was that Joe in his spare hours in the afternoons made money by running messages for the Western Union and by so doing was able to go to the circus every year as well as enjoy other childish delights.

Crack-Down Johnson would say that the youngster just got scrambled in the omelette. But I prefer to assume that he was not incidental at all, that it was a case of our great Government concentrating all of its power against him, that the Nation's intellectual strength and ingenuity were marshalled to head him off. Figuratively our troops, our natural and material wealth were drawn up in front of Joe with the warning that while he may have been going to the circus in the past he could not go any more.

What they did to Joe, of course, was to codify him. Instead of his growing up to be the president of the company, as I am sure he would have had the Government not stepped in front with a warning hand, he will be, to my way of thinking, just a codification now.

* * * *

What is wrong with Joe, what the Government has against him, or at least the premise on which it moved against him, is that he is not quite 16 years old. Joe contends this is not really his fault and I am inclined to agree with him. He feels so bitter about it, though, that he is convinced that had he been 18 the age limit would have been advanced. The point is that both Joe and I believe it was he the Government and 125,000,000 people were after, notwithstanding their professions of being after the sweatshops. The fact can't be escaped that they got Joe.

He was in to see me the other day about getting a pass for the circus. I am quite sure I could get him one but a question arises as to whether I would be violating the code.

* * * *

After all now, when the Government and 125,000,000 people set up a code to prohibit Joe from making money in his spare hours and from going to the circus, am I a good citizen if I conspire with him to defeat their purpose? Would it not be, as a matter of fact, downright dangerous because our people are a determined lot when they embark upon an undertaking. Look how they plunged with all their force and might into the World War.

Nations are loath to stand before these 125,000,000 people when they are on a rampage. They have said now that they don't want Joe to go to the circus. It is not for me to ask the reason why. The people have spoken, long live the people!

* * * *

One can imagine their fury if they were to find they had been thwarted in their purpose, if Joe were to get to the circus in spite of all they had done. How would they find out? Well, one doesn't like to be doing unlawful things and anyhow they might see Joe out there.

Notwithstanding all this, however, I have a hunch that the circus is exactly where Joe will be. I think I can get him the pass. It's what I call being real rebellious.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

DILLINGER—U. S. WAR COMMUNIQUES.

The Minnesota Front, May 3.—There is little to report in this salient. During the night there was a sharp exchange of fire between the Fifth Corps and Dillinger, no direct hits being scored by the former. The State is moving up reinforcements. A possible counter-attack by Dillinger is expected.

* * * *

Missouri—A report that Dillinger had poked his head over a fence early today caused an immediate conference of the General Staff, which is said to be split over the question whether the armies from all other fronts should be called here to concentrate on Dillinger or whether a victory is possible over him by using only 12 divisions of shock troops. There is growing pessimism at army headquarters, the belief being openly expressed in some quarters that the conflict will settle down to a long period of trench warfare.

* * * *

Washington, D. C.—The War Office refused today to comment on a report by a press service that the Government had perfected a new long-range gun capable of bombarding a bandit from a distance of 70 miles. Similar reticence was the response to inquiries regarding a new super-tank designed especially to stop lone outlaws from making a sucker of the Nation.

* * * *

Illinois—There is a report here from war correspondents that Dillinger is planning a new offensive against the United States within the next six weeks. Dillinger has been moving himself north and west by motor transport for the past five days, carrying supplies for a long, hard battle. The forces opposing Dillinger are in need of socks and heavy underwear as it seems probably the war will extend into another winter.

* * * *

New York—Speakers at a mammoth war rally here tonight urged that the United States ask for allied aid in its battle against Dillinger. "We helped England and France in 1917," said Col. Shrewsberry Butz, "and England and France should help us now in our war on Dillinger."

* * * *

Philadelphia—The first sales in the Liberty Bond Drive to raise money to support the war between Dillinger and America were made here tonight, thousands of patriots responding. The Buy a Battleship and Help Sink a Bandit Campaign starts tomorrow.

* * * *

Washington, D. C.—All the municipal, State and National forces asked for an armistice today, but Dillinger bluntly refused it. The Capital is in an uproar. "How are we gonna get Dillinger to listen to peace offers if he won't even grant us an armistice?" demanded the War Department.

One Can't Be a Bully Unless Many Are Weak and Afraid

By Robert Quillen

When Negroes in the South have a fair or a frolic, it sometimes happens that a few ill-behaved white people attend uninvited in search of free amusement. If they are drinking, as they usually are, cold and sullen looks tell them how unwelcome they are and remind them that drunken white men should flock with their own kind.

Exclusiveness can work both ways. And if all groups in America were wise enough to realize that and profit by it, many of our troubles would be ended.

In all lands, democratic or otherwise, social rank is based on wealth.

It doesn't matter how the wealth was obtained, but only when. Wealth piled up by a piratical great-grandfather snubs wealth inherited from an honest father.

The fortune that gives most social prestige is not the largest, but the one farthest removed from the ancestor who made it.

However obtained, wealth is power. It is a power because those who haven't it are willing to do almost anything to get it.

Being a power, it makes the possessor feel superior to other mortals. And in order to emphasize his superiority and enjoy it more, he sets up a barrier against the world and says: "I am exclusive; you can not enter my house, for you are poor and therefore common."

Now, the poor may be superior to the rich in wisdom, charm, breeding, character, beauty and intelligence; but they covet money and belittle themselves by conceding that one who has it is superior.

Moreover, being told to stay out of the "exclusive" one's house, they ardently long to get in. And since money is always the passport, first or last, they devote their lives to the getting of money.

Unable to make it fast enough to reach their goal quickly, they pretend to have it. They go in debt. They deny themselves in secret to make a show in public.

And thus, while the very rich spend millions they never earned to build a finer mansion or bigger yacht than equally rich acquaintances, lesser snobs in every city, town and hamlet do their utmost to make a rich show in order to impress their neighbors and "be somebody."

And the whole silly system is inspired by the "exclusiveness" of mediocre people who would be nobodies if the world had sense enough to say: "You poor simpletons! Who wants to associate with you?"

Washington Road Will Be Restored

Long-Abandoned Stafford Highway to Be Graded.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—The long-abandoned road traversing that section of Stafford County east of Stafford Heights and running north and south from Falmouth to the White Oak road will be added to the secondary system of the State highway department, Julian V. Brooks, of the Stafford County Board of Supervisors, announces.

It is believed the road was one of the principal arteries of travel when Falmouth was a thriving riverport village. Supervisor Brooks suggested it be named the "Washington School Road" because it was probably used many times by George Washington when he went to school in Falmouth from Fredericksburg.

It will be passable in the fall, after it has been graveled, graded and made into a 30-foot thoroughfare. Mr. Brooks disclosed that none of the land had to be purchased, necessary property being donated by John L. Pratt, owner of Chatham, and Mrs. Agnes G. Wallace, owner of Clear View.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Capt. Liddell-Hart.

When one considers the distinguished position this man justly holds as military expert of the London Times, as military editor of the Encyclopedia Brittanica, the author of a long list of authoritative histories and biographies, the astounding, inexplicable thing is his youth.

When I first read one of his books I supposed he was at least 60 years old, and that he must at least have been an important officer in the World War, about which he has written so many books and articles.

To my amazement, I discovered that he was born October 31, 1895. When the war broke out in August, 1914, he was, therefore, only 18 years old.

Let us see what he has done with the sword and with the pen. So far as I know, I am the only person who has called attention to the tender age at which he began and continued his career; but of all the astonishing things he has done, the most astonishing thing to me is the few years that sufficed for doing them.

He was educated at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, although I don't see just when he managed that, for he enlisted in the war when he was 18. He served the whole four years, was wounded, got his half pay in 1924 and retired in 1927.

In 1917 he invented the battle drill system and expanding torrent method of attack. In 1918 he published his first book, called "New Methods of Infantry Training." Since then he has published more than a dozen important works, has officially visited the training centers of the French army and of the Italian army and air force. His books on military tactics have been translated into the languages of Europe.

But in addition to his scientific treatises on military tactics he has written full-length biographies that for an ordinary man would seem to have required years of preparation. His life of Scipio is called "A Greater Than Napoleon;" his life of Sherman is called "Sherman: Soldier, Realist, American," and shows minute study of our Civil War; his "Life of Foch" is a drastic revision of previous appraisals, and his book, "Ten Years After," published in 1928, is a historical study of all the allied, German and American generals of the World War.

"And now appears his biography of one of the greatest enigmas of modern times, T. E. Lawrence, alias Shaw. The book is called "Col. Lawrence," and tells more about him than we had known before.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

LOOKING the other morning, as I look every morning, at that choice and delicious comic strip, "Napoleon and Uncle Elby," I could not help thinking how much Clifford McBride and the whole tribe of cartoonists owe to one man. Indeed, their debt is almost to one picture. For though A. B. Frost, that grand old master of the drawing pen, did a hundred and one fine things in his day, nothing to my mind approaches the success of "The Cat Who Swallowed Rat Poison."

The very funniest sketch in the world, which I will back against all comers you may suggest, is here reproduced. It is the second scene in the panel of six. But you don't really need the others—the first which shows the cat sitting quietly before the hearth at the feet of the lady knitting, a queasy look beginning to steal over its face; or the mad rout of the cat through the house, scattering everyone right and left; or the final mordant touch when the cat, I take it, is dead. All you need to study is the face of the cat as it here leaps up in horrified and ghastly amazement. And then you will see, time and again, where "Napoleon" comes from.

Frost's sketch was printed in Harper's Magazine in 1881. Every now and then it crops up in some book of reproductions, as alive as the day it was made. I found it this time in that monumental work of that testy and sincere old gentleman, Joseph Pennell—"Pen Drawing and Draughtsmen" (Macmillan, 1920, $25). Not long back $16 would get you a copy of this all-time best book on the art.

Along with the New York Times book section, I find myself properly corrected by the following welcome letter:

1840 California St.,
May 1, 1934.

My dear Mr. Hall:

In your very interesting column, which I always read, you comment this morning on Mr. Charles Morrow Wilson's "Meriweather Lewis, of Lewis & Clark." The author, you say, "has made a careful, detailed and very readable story."

However readable it may be, it is not careful, and most of its details happen to be absurdly wrong. Parts of it seem to be based on Emerson Hough's preposterous novel, "The Magnificent Adventure," and other parts are mere guesswork. A student of the Lewis & Clark expedition will read the book with amazement. The author has not taken the trouble to acquaint himself with the basic facts of that immortal journey. His geography is a kind of "Alice in Wonderland" region; he has no knowledge, except in spots, of the route traversed; and he confuses the personalities of the members of the expedition in a manner made familiar to us by Mr. H. I. Phillips' famous "Garble Sisters."

The book has been highly praised in the New York Times by a writer evidently as ignorant of the subject as is the author, and perhaps it has received encomiums elsewhere. I predict, however, that when the historical journals and reviews begin to deal with the work, Mr. Wilson will fondly wish that he had chosen another subject.

Yours very truly,
W. J. GHENT.

For a dozen years Mr. Ghent has been a close student of the West. He has contributed to the "Dictionary of National Biography," and is at present at work on a history of the fur trade.

I only wish I had known enough of the subject to do so factual and vigorous a piece of criticism.

S. N. Behrman, that very acute and able master of polite comedy, has collected three of his scripts, with new prefaces, in "Three Plays" (Farr & Rinehart, $2.50). They are "Serena Blandish: or the Difficulty of Getting Married" (1929); "Meteor" (1929), and "The Second Man" (1927)—the first successes, and indeed the first plays, of the author of "Brief Moment," "Biography," and the movie "Queen Christina." It is an indispensable volume for lovers of the modern stage.

"The funniest ant book in the world," according to British critics, is Lady Estella Cave's "Ant Antics," just published in this country by Dutton. Stanley Baldwin, Sir James Barrie, Julian Huxley and Beverley Nichols have written her in appreciation. The following verse came from Laurence Housman:

"Here is Ann Estella Cave
Telling me how ants behave;
In my heart I have to quell a
Rising doubt in Ann Estella—
From a fear that, if I can't,
She'll depict me as an ant;
Therefore, O Estella Ann,
I'll believe you—if I can!"

Chain-Store Tax Test Case Opens

Fredericksburg Levy of $250 Attacked.

Richmond, May 3 (Spl.).—Judge Luther B. Way, in United States District Court, today heard arguments on the validity of the Fredericksburg "chain-store" tax.

The test of the Fredericksburg ordinance is being made by the Sanitary Grocery Co., which through counsel holds that it is "unconstitutional, illegal and void," as well as "partial, unreasonable, confiscatory, arbitrary and unequal and a clear and hostile discrimination against a selected body of taxpayers."

The ordinance taxes each store or mercantile establishment in excess of one under the same general management, supervision or ownership, at the rate of $250.

Teacher Is First Official Candidate

Charleston, W. Va., May 3 (Spl.). Conaway, a school teacher of Boardtree, Marshall County. He seeks the Democratic nomination.

Formal announcements of their candidacies for the same nomination have been made by J. Alfred Taylor, Fayettesville editor, and Graham Sale, Welch attorney, but their certificates have not been received.

Cut Rate Starts Danville Taxi War

Danville, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—A taxicab war developed here today following the entry into the local field of a fleet of cabs which undertake to carry four persons anywhere in town for 25 cents, a rate cheaper than the street cars. Independent drivers charge more.

Police were asked to aid the new company, whose dispatcher the past few days has received 20 fake telephone calls ordering cabs to various parts of the city.

Judges Reversed to Give "Men in White" Pulitzer Prize—Next Week's Programs

Anderson Drama of Scots' Queen Held Best; An Ovation for Dean.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The winner of the Pultizer Prize for drama this year seems not to have won it.

Although official announcement of the Pulitzer awards is not due until May 8, it has become known with some surety that the finding of the triumvirate of distinguished oracles of the drama as to the best play of the season was set aside by the trustees of the Pulizter Foundation at Columbia University and the award made where they thought it might better go.

That is to say, the Messrs. Clayton Hamilton, Walter Prichard Eaton and Austin Strong, the ostensible play judges, on whose recommendation the prize presumably would be bestowed, were summarily brushed aside and another play, frequently mentioned as a leading candidate for the honor, was awarded the coveted diadem.

The play selected by the judges was Maxwell Anderson's majestic drama of "Mary of Scotland;" the play which it is reported actually will be acclaimed the best of the year is Sidney Kingsley's "Men in White."

Unanimous Choice.

I could have told you with some foundation for my belief as early as last fall that "Mary of Scotland" would be the choice of the scholarly Mr. Clayton Hamilton, even in the face of the committee of judges; of which he was and is a member, having bestowed the accolade upon Maxwell Anderson's "Both Your Houses" the season before. The degree of Mr. Hamilton's enthusiasm over "Mary of Scotland" could not have been engendered a second time in the same season. Since the three advisory counselors of the Columbia high command were unanimous in their selection, it is to be supposed that they entertained comparable feelings of respect toward the Anderson entry.

On the other hand, as already numerously reported in these columns, "Men in White" was Prof. Emeritus William Lyon Phelps' unequivocal choice for the nomination as best play of the season already closed in Washington and about to come to at least a theoretical end in New York.

Has Happened Before.

This is not the first time that the appraisal of the advisory council has been set aside and the Pulitzer award made on the basis of judgment of those whom they evidently are intended only to assist in a friendly, but not mandatory, fashion.

Even when the judges' decision has not been set aside, there have been times when its justification has been seriously impugned and others when the race for preferment has been so close that any one of several awards might have been made with ample argument to support the final selection.

It is not improbable that there was some feeling among those in high places in the administration of the Pulitzer endowments that two awards to Mr. Anderson in a row would be something in the nature of creating a monopoly, even if Mr. Anderson's plays were examples of superior craftsmanship and profoundly fine writing.

With regard to the continuation of the theatrical season on Broadway, "Jig Saw," the Theater Guild's production of Dawn Powell's new and slightly ribald comedy, which opened in the Ethel Barrymore Theater on Monday night, bids fair to carry it along well into the hot weather.

While not in any sense proclaimed a "big" play, nor yet an "important" or "significant" one, by the gentlemen of the Broadway Death Watch, "Jig Saw" was critically greeted as a diverting entertainment worthy of the attention of sophisticates not averse to a little immorality in their contemplation of life in the gilded purlieus of the penthouses.

It was our thought when "Jig Saw" opened here prior to its Manhattan invasion that it was practically made to order for New York's "silly season" of the drama. That, as a matter of fact, is still our thought.

Theatrical Love Feast.

A love feast was held in the National Theater on Tuesday night.

Ever interested in the playhouse and devoted to its causes, Daniel Frohman, octogenarian dean of the American theater, in the Capital in the interests of the Actors' Fund Benefit, to be held in the National Theater on next Sunday night, on Tuesday evening attended the National Theater Players' performance of "The Pursuit of Happiness." Seated in the second row on the aisle, he was, of course, instantly recognized by those on the stage and by many seated near him in the orchestra—for this kindly man has a warm genius for friendship and, once met and known, is never forgotten.

Following the fall of the final curtain, Mr. Frohman was introduced from his place down front and addressed the audience briefly, not on his pet project, the Actors' Fund Benefit, but upon the broader aspects of the theater, a few of his reminiscences relating to plays and stars he and his brothers, Charles and Gustav, both deceased, had presented in the National during the past half century or more and a fine appreciation of the enterprise and courage of Stephen E. Cochran in keeping his theater open in face of adverse conditions these past several years.

Received Ovation.

His remarks were greeted with a thunderous ovation, eloquent of the esteem in which he is held by the theater-going and theater-loving public.

Proceeding backstage, Mr. Frohman personally expressed his appreciation to the members of the National Stock Company and John McKee, their director, for what he was pleased to describe as one of the finest presentations of an interesting play he had ever seen by a repertoire company.

Here was one of those gracious occasions in the theater that could not possibly have been anticipated or planned. Impromptu and unprogrammed, it was one of those felicitous gestures on the part of both a distinguished figure in the theater and an understanding and sympathetic public that linger long in memory and add warmth and color to the romance and charm of the playhouse and its people.

Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club Orchestra, it seems, is to be heard again in Washington before long. Returning to this country from abroad only last Tuesday, May 1, Cab tonight will be guest artist on Rudy Vallee's broadcast hour. Tomorrow Calloway and his band will open an engagement at Loew's Paradise Theater in the Bronx. This, one learns, will be followed by engagements in virtually all of the important cities east of the Mississippi, including Washington. They will not get back to their Harlem Cotton Club until fall. The Washington engagement, I am led to believe, will be in a downtown theater—probably one in which they have been heard before.

Another Meets De Lawd.

Nothing short of death, apparently, can remove an actor from the cast of Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures." Death, however, has claimed another of the players who helped make the "Pastures" notable. Jesse Shipp, playwright and actor, who last appeared in the Connelly version of the Old Testament Scriptures, died in the Jamaica, Long Island, Hospital last Tuesday.

Shipp was forced to leave the company in January and succumbed on May 1. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, but had lived for many years in New York. He came East with Bert Williams and George Walker and wrote the books for many of the Williams & Walker musical productions—and what masterpieces of genre comedy many of them were!

Their equal hasn't been seen since.

By skillful juggling, yesterday's broadcast hour through WJSV was made to appear even to me as 11:15 a. m. So I dragged the weary torso off the

Straight From the Studios

Helen Hayes Faces Crowded Schedule in Hollywood; Evelyn Venable to Be Filmed as Jane Eyre; The Passing Hollywood Pageant.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, May 2.—If all the pictures are made that are named possible for Helen Hayes, there will be little or no chance of her going back to the stage next season. Her plan is, of course, to return for "Mary of Scotland," following sojourn in Southern California. She hopes to play Maxwell Anderson's poetic creation on the road as well as in New York, emulating Katharine Cornell and Eva Le Gallienne in giving Manhattan productions to the country at large.

EVELYN VENABLE

Now, however, in the films, there is "Vanessa" first of all. Additionally "The Wicked Woman." Also "The Lost Horizon," by Harry Segall—there is just a dicker on for that. So that would make three pictures in all, if M. G. M. could induce Miss Hayes to stay that long.

• • • •

Evelyn Venable's Lead.

It is fairly certain that Evelyn Venable will be chosen to play the role of Jane Eyre in the production of the famous novel by Charlotte Bronte. This is one of the currently proposed classics, and is to be made by Trem Carr. Although this is an independent venture, it has marked potentialities, and the role of the heroine is as nearly ideal as could be imagined for Miss Venable. Her experiences in school and romance have strong elements of the dramatic, and Jane Eyre was distinctly the mental type in her reactions to the turbulent events that threatened to engulf her, an orphan and alone.

• • • •

Garbo's Feature Settled.

Settled definitely it is that Greta Garbo will appear in "The Painted Veil" and that production will start in about a month. John Meehan and Salka Viertel, who was identified with "Queen Christina," are doing the screen play. Richard Boleslavsky will direct, with Hunt Stromberg supervising. "The Shining Hour" and "Camille" have been named as other possible future Garbo features.

• • • •

Perennial Team.

Now that Sally Eilers is leaving Fox, it looks as if James Dunn and Claire Trevor will be a permanent team. Miss Trevor's new contract calls for her to appear with Dunn in "The First Baby," to be directed by James Tingling. Miss Trevor was mentioned for the film, "Wanted," but that role has been given to Rosemary Ames instead.

• • • •

Diana Wynyard Cast.

Not closed, but practically sealed is the deal for Diana Wynyard to play in John Galsworthy's "One More River." The picture is to be made by Universal, with James Whale directing, and Miss Wynyard is very much wanted for that role, but the contract has not yet been signed, according to official information.

• • • •

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

First of the "Minute Mystery" films to be made on the West Coast will start today. The picture is called "Stolen Pearls," and Samuel Hinds, Geneva Mitchell and Charles Wilson are in the cast.

Esther Ralston may play in "There Is Always Tomorrow," at Universal.

Alan Dinehart and Dorothy Libaire are in "Always Honest," now called "Baby, Take a Bow," with James Dunn and Claire Trevor.

Shooting of interior scenes on a temporary stage is proceeding apace on the "Treasure Island" location at Catalina Island. Very little outdoor work could be done during the past week or so, owing to fog.

Mala, hero of "Eskimo," has written a book of his impressions of people here.

Rumors are that M-G-M will purchase "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and "The Gorgeous Hussy," but nothing settled yet.

Plans are made for Herbert Mundin's first appearance under his new contract. It will be in "Fun in the Air."

Thelma Rambeau, sister of Marjorie Rambeau, is making her debut in pictures. She will play in "Grand Canary," in which Marjorie is one of the principals.

Ostermoor in time to make it only to be apprised at the last minute that it was all a ghastly mistake and I needn't annoy the microphone until 11:45. So I am bringing suit for that extra half hour's sleep at the rate of $1,000 per minute. The price is not exorbitant, taking into consideration that it was in the middle of the night like that!

Self-Defense Note.

No lady, I am NOT a crooner! I am a sword swallower—with the "s" tacked onto the other end, if you get the idea.

New Offerings Augur Week of Ace Pastiming

Stage and Screen Combine to Afford Variety of Diverting Programs.

Another play new to the Capital and still current on Broadway, a delightful comedy that was one of last season's distinct successes and what is heralded as one of the most impressive motion picture productions ever released constitute the highlights of the new week in the theaters. The Gayety, of course, will be in the running with a new burlesque attraction and on Saturday at 1 p. m., Glen Echo Park will throw open its gates for the summer season. Thus the late spring will not be found lacking in entertainment.

"The Wind and the Rain," now in its fourth month on Broadway and its seventh in London, will be the attraction at the Belasco Theater for the week beginning next Monday evening, with Morgan Farley in the principal role. In this play, never before presented on a Washington stage, the author, Merton Hodge, is said to have written deftly and sincerely of a group of engaging young medical students in Edinburgh University. The central figure is a young fellow of charm and some diffidence who is being put through college by his mother and is away from home for the first time in his life. The play hinges upon the manner in which a young girl contrives, in a measure, to take the place in his life of his mother and sweetheart back home. The supporting cast includes Patricia Calvert, Burfors Hampden, Marcelle Journat, Lillian and Phillips Tonge, Barbara Weeks and Leslie Barrie.

Clare Kummer's comedy hit, "Her Master's Voice," which has just completed a full season on Broadway following its early engagement at the National, will comprise the second bill of the National Theater Players, opening next Monday night. The plot of "Her Master's Voice" doesn't much matter, but Mrs. Kummer's wit and humor certainly do. The story of the manner in which a young husband out of a job circumvents an interfering aunt of his wife's, affords one of the most delightful evenings in the theater any one could possibly wish. Mary Loane joins the Players next week to assume the ingenue lead. Rich roles are afforded Ruth Abbott, Roy Roberts, Mrs. Hibbard, Romaine Callender, Raymond Bramley, Kathryn Givney, Burke Clarke and the rest of the National ensemble.

• • • •

Manager Jimmy Lake of the Gayety Theater announces the fascinating Elvie and her "Flirting Lassies," as the burlesque offering to hold the boards on Ninth street for the week beginning Sunday afternoon with the customary matinee performance. Jean Williams, Lola Perce and Margie White are the feminine stars, with Harry Stratton and Eddie Dale accounting for the major comedy roles. Amateur night will be observed Friday.

• • • •

It is expected that grown-ups and youngsters alike will flock to Glen Echo Park next Saturday afternoon when this popular playground is thrown open for the summer months at 1 p. m. The park has been completely refurbished during the winter and all of the old standby amusements will be found more completely satisfactory than ever, with many new ones added. The Crystal Pool will not open until later in the month. Dave McWilliams again will be in charge of a 15-piece orchestra to provide music for dancing in the handsome new Spanish ballroom.

• • • •

"The House of Rothschild," latest of the Twentieth Century releases and declared by those who have viewed it to be one of the great pictures, will open its engagement at Loew's Palace Theater with a special Friday night premiere. George Arliss, the star, is supported by a cast of distinction, led by Loretta Young, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray, Helen Westley, Mrs. Arliss, Boris Karloff, Robert Young, C. Aubrey Smith and scores more. A short musical subject, a cartoon comedy and newsreel will augment the feature.

• • • •

Beginning tomorrow, Warner Brothers' Earle Theater will present "Upper World," featuring Warren William, Mary Astor and Ginger Rogers, as the chief feature of its screen entertainment. The vaudeville bill will be headlined by Emile Boreo, one of the most versatile of character comedians. Other acts are to be presented by the Donatella Brothers and Carmen, a quartet of musician and dancers; Violet Carlson, late of "The Student Prince," and the Honey Family, gymnasts. "Upper World" is by Ben Hecht and sets forth the story of a millionaire husband and father who becomes interested in a chorus girl.

• • • •

John Barrymore's most recent picture, "Twentieth Century," a film version of the stage hit of the same name, by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, is announced as the major screen feature at RKO-Keith's Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this study in theatrical temperaments, largely on a train en route from Chicago to New York, the youngest of the Barrymores is supported by Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns and Ralph Forbes. Short sound subjects will comprise the auxillary program.

• • • •

W. C. Fields, supported by Larry (Buster) Crabbe, Joan Marsh, Adrienne Ames and numerous others, will occupy the screen at Loew's Fox Theater for the new week, beginning tomorrow, in "You're Telling Me," a new Paramount laughmaker. On the stage a group of famous radio artists will be presented in one big revue. Among them will be Tony Wans, Phil Cook, "man of a thousand voices;" Tito Guizar, George Hall and his Orchestra, Gypsy Nina, Peggy Keenan and Sandra Phillips, Ruthie Barnes and Al Llewelyn. The bill will be completed by newsreel and orchestra.

• • • •

Edward Everett Horton and Genevieve Tobin are the principal players in a unique screen comedy to be presented for the week beginning today at the Rialto Theater under the title of "Uncertain Lady." Adapted from the Harry Segall play, the comedy has been brought to the screen by George O'Neil and Doris Anderson, with Karl Freund directing. Supporting the stars are Paul Cavanaugh, Mary Nash, George Meeker, Dorothy Peterson, Arthur Hoyt. Short-reel subjects Donald Reed, Herbert Corthell and Arthur Hoyt. Short-reel subjects and Universal News will complete the program.

• • • •

"Coming Out Party," in which Frances Dee and Gene Raymond will be seen on the screen at Loew's Columbia for one week, beginning tomorrow, lifts the veil on one of America's most polite rackets—the launching of a debutante on a successful quest for a suitable mate to lead to the altar. Alison Skipworth, Nigel Bruce, Harry Green and many others are listed among the supporting players. The screen play was written by Gladys Unger and Jesse L. Lasky, jr. Supplementary short-reels will round out the bill.

• • • •

As its foremost screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater will present "Flying Down to Rio," one of the season's more successful musicals, with Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire and a notable cast in the leading roles. It was this picture that introduced the "Carioca." Completing the bill will be 15 minutes of newsreel, a bridge subject, traveltalk and cartoon comedy.

Rival Profiles Come to Screens

Two gentlemen whose side views are said to resemble each other come to Washington screens tomorrow. On the left, above, is John Barrymore as he appears in the motion picture version of the successful stage play, "Twentieth Century," to be seen tomorrow at RKO-Keith's, and, at right, Warren William, featured in "Upper World," also opening tomorrow, at the Earle. Ben Hecht had a hand in writing both, the Barrymore vehicle in collaboration with Charles MacArthur, who is by way of being Mr. Helen Hayes.

2 Arrested on Charge Of Posing as Navy Men

Norfolk, Va., May 3 (AP).—John F. Regan and Fred L. Robinson, alias Jack O'Connor, erstwhile publishers of the Navy Magazine, were arrested in New York yesterday and are being brought to Norfolk to face charges of falsely representing themselves to be enlisted men in the United States Navy and illegally wearing a Navy uniform.

The Navy Magazine, according to information at the office of the United States district attorney here, flourished for three or four months with Regan and Robinson, or O'Connor, representing themselves as Navy enlisted men.

Southern Association Pass Rule Rescinded

Memphis, Tenn., May 3 (AP).—The Southern Association's intentional pass rule was formally rescinded today by unanimous consent of the eight clubs of the circuit.

John D. Martin, president of the association, announced after completing a poll of directors this morning that "the rule will not be effective in today's game, or in any subsequent games."

Generals Take Conference Golf Title

Starts Final Day 8 Strokes Behind, but Scores; Duke Second.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 3 (AP). Washington and Lee's well-matched quartet overcame the brilliance of two outstanding Duke sophomores to win the four-man team championship in the 36-hole Southern Conference Golf Tournament here today.

Duke's Graft Cliff Perry, who shot a sensational 73 on the afternoon 18 holes to win the individual crown with a medal score of 149, and his teammate, Joe Powell, who posted a 154, kept the Blue Devils in the running all the way, but Washington and Lee's four-man team added up a 645 to win.

Duke was second with 652, 9 points ahead of the University of North Carolina team, which needed 661. North Carolina State followed with 685, and Virginia came in fifth, with 690.

Overcome Advantage.

With Carolina and Duke tied for the lead after 18 holes of play, the Generals, starting 8 strokes back, overcame the advantage and went on to triumph. Jimmie Watts, Washington and Lee ace, whose 75 paced the field after the morning round, soared to 80 after lunch, but his creditable 155 gave him the tournament's third lowest medal score and showed the way to a courageous Washington and Lee team.

Their game, helped by the light rain which fell in the afternoon to slow down the lightning fast greens, the Washington and Lee quartet played remarkably on the outgoing afternoon nine, with Charlie Cross carding a 37 and Watts, Duncan McDavis and Henry Cohen scoring 38s, to put the Generals in a threatening position. The quartet finished well, with McDavid posting 161, Cohen 162 and Cross 167 over the difficult Cascades course, whose par 71 has never ben bettered by an amateur.

Third Title in Year.

The victory for Coach E. Parker Twombly's golfers was the third Southern Conference title of the year for the Generals, who previously had won the basket ball and wrestling championships.

Frederick High Team Beaten by Rally, 7-6

Frederick, Md., May 3 (Spl.). Mount St. Mary's College Preps set back Frederick High School on Cadet Field, 7 to 6. The collegians won in the seventh inning when a wild throw by James enabled two runners to cross the plate. While Luan held the Cadets to five hits, the blows were bunched in the first and fourth innings and, with errors, counted for runs. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning.

Group to Be Entertained Prior to Competition at Catholic U.

Seven boys, who will oppose each other tomorrow in the Catholic University's final of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, will meet tonight for the first time, not as rivals, but to share in hospitality arranged for them by a committee of the university's faculty members and students.

Competitors arriving from out of town will be met at termini by a student committee headed by Henry Begnal, president of the university's chapter of the Pi Delta Epsilon Fraternity, and will be overnight guests of Father Russell, president of St. Thomas' Hall on the campus.

A theater party at the Palace Theater for the premiere showing of "Rothschild" will bring together for the opening social function the Washington, Maryland and Virginia competitors, as well as the faculty and student hosts.

The finalists include Albert J. Laun, St. Mary's Preparatory School, Emmitsburg, Md.; Robert H. Gardiner, jr., Boyce (Va.) Agricultural High School, and the following from local schools: Joseph Michalowicz, Gonzaga High School; John P. Walsh, St. John's High School; Earle W. Martyn, Eastern High School; Richard Logan, Western High School, and Robert M. Winfree, McKinley High School.

Promptly at 10 a. m. tomorrow the oral and written examinations, through which the winner will be selected, will be opened in McMahon Hall on the university campus, with Dr. Otto J. Ramler heading the following faculty members as a committee of examiners: The Rev. Edward Benedict, Dr. Leo Behrendt, Dr. Henry Peter Ward, Dr. Thomas G. Foran and Charles Fox Borden.

On conclusion of examinations at 1 p. m., the contestants will be guests of honor at a luncheon given in their honor at th campus main dining hall.

Following a campus tour, the party will proceed on a sightseeing trip, which will include a visit to the Capitol, the Zoological Park, residential sections, Potomac Park, Arlington and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

A program in which the scholarship winner will be announced and all finalists will be presented with medals, gifts of The Post, will bring the campus event to a close.

The third of the project's campus finals will be held at Georgetown University on Wednesday, May 9, with ten finalists competing for the scholarship offered by that institution's School of Foreign Sservice.

On Saturday, May 12, 19 girls and 7 boys will compete at American University in the fourth and last of the series of campus finals.

Radio Waves and Ripples

SINCE the day a midget sat in the lap of J. P. Morgan at the Senate stock market investigation, the number of people in the Capital who would reject ideas of circus press agents without considering them at least twice has dwindled almost to zero.

The other night at the newspaper women's party Mme. (sees-all-knows-all) Hudespeth read Mrs. Roosevelt's mind. Some one else guessed her weight. Quite in keeping with the carnival spirit of the affair it was, of course.

On WMAL this afternoon we find once more this Mme. Hudespeth, being interviewed by Donald Douglas. If Douglas were only a mind reader, the whole thing could be called off.

A joint session of both the House and Senate commemorating the 100th anniversary of the death of the Marquis de Lafayette is likely to return scenes comparable to those attending a Congressional opening.

Certain to be there are the full membership of both houses, the justices of the Supreme Sourt, officers of the Diplomatic Corps and microphones of both networks, though Columbia alone has announced plans for a broadcasting so far.

Expected to complete the picture of the opening session with his presence and a speech is President Roosevelt.

IF you think anything at all of your favorite N. B. C. announcer the thing to do is send him a horseshoe or a rabbit's foot.

For should it suddenly stop raining and Monday dawn bright and clear, the Calvert Street Bridge will be moved.

And N. B. C. feels it can not now, with conscience, back down on its promise to broadcast the moving, a performance requiring the services of two announcers. It owes that much to its public.

And the announcers feel that they can not now, with conscience, handle the broadcast, a performance requiring their standing on a moving bridge. They owe that much to wife and kids.

The announcers further feel that the best way to handle matters of conscience is to draw straws. And right there is where a horseshoe or rabbit's foot will come in handy. The announcer with either or both should, by all odds, draw a nice medium-length straw.

A local N. B. C. team of hillbillies known as the Willie Green Hayshakers seems to be having more than its share of sponsor fatalities.

First, a bottled water company decided it could get along just as well with a set of recordings. Now N. B. C. minds have concluded that the Hayshakers' motor car company clients are on the verge of wanting new talent.

The show goes out tonight at 6:30 as "Out Front," with Marie Fowler, the personality girl, and a Rudy Schramm orchestra.

We were a college freshman and pretty sick of things generally. Civilization, as we saw it, palled us. English I and II had given us a Thorelian distate for crowds. We wanted to go somewhere and wrest a living from Nature. We wanted to go to Alaska when we heard of a classmate whom the Bureau of Fisheries sent there the summer before for the salmon counting season. It was all right, he said, if once in a while you caught a salmon, thus simplifying the living-on-nature process.

We didn't go because we said our progenitors were entirely Republican, when all the time we had an uncle running for Congress on the Democratic ticket.

And now all our frustrated desires are thrown back at us by the latest idea from the Columbia novelty broadcast department—a program from the Coast Guard Cutter Northland when she steams from Seattle harbor on her annual trip to the North country May 16.

Something like 1,200 votes have been received and tabulated in the Poodlescatstown election we have been reporting exclusively—get this—for the people to whom WRC's Aunt Sue and Polly is an important item of entertainment.

The results so far: Pink Eye, 251; Pep, 240; Brown Doggie, 235; Cinnamon Bear, 228; Muley Wuley, 228; Duckfoot de Luby, 199; Jackie Rabbit, 187; Catniper, 181; Mr. Squizzle Squozzle, 50; for Bita Gita to join the club, 613; against, 610.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Final broadcast of Dr. Damorsch's Music Appreciation Hour, 10 a. m.; Mrs. Roosevelt addressing the thirteenth biennial convention of the National Y. M. C. A., 12:30 p. m.; Hotel St. Regis Orchestra, 10:35 p. m.

WMAL—Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King, interviewed by The Post's Margaret Santry, 2 p. m.; "The New Deal," Gen. Johnson, 9:15 p. m.

WJSV—Mrs. Roosevelt at the Y. W. C. A. convention, 12:30 p. m.; the Court of Human Relations carries on, 7:30 p. m.; the experts pick the Kentucky Derby winner, 10 p. m.

Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr., one of the leading lights in securing passage of legislation legalizing boxing in the District, will be interviewed by Ted Ostenkamp at 6 p. m. over Station WOL today.

Ball Fan Wins Bet, But Foul Is Called

The Man Who Lost Turns Out a Detective.

Thomas Fahey, an inmate of Soldiers' Home, went to the ball game Wednesday. It was a good game and he enjoyed it. But when Babe Ruth came to bat, he turned to a stranger and offered to wager a dollar the Babe wouldn't connect.

The bet was accepted. Babe Ruth struck out. Fahey turned to collect. But the stranger didn't want to pay—he was Detective Roy Blick, of Police Headquarters.

Fahey appeared in Police Court yesterday. He admitted the bet was made, so Judge Given warned him against the practice and ordered his release.

Blick explained he couldn't pay the wager because he was sent to Griffith Stadium to stop betting.

Discover why FOUR ROSES is America's finest whiskey

AFTER ALL, it's taste that counts in whiskey.

We invite you to test the flavor of Four Roses against that of any other brand. For here's a whiskey that, in actual blindfold tests, has triumphed over 30 other famous whiskies.

No wonder! Four Roses is made the way 92% of America's liquor was made in the old days—from the finest oak-aged Maryland Rye whiskies. No raw green liquor added.

You'll know, the minute you taste it, that Four Roses is a better whiskey. It's so smooth! And if used with moderation, it leaves no headache.

It costs more to make whiskey the way Four Roses is made. And it takes more skill. But Frankfort isn't one of those distilling companies born with Repeal. Frankfort has been making fine whiskey through four generations.

Four Roses is bottled only in full-measure packages. It comes sealed in the exclusive Frankfort Pack, a tin-top-and-bottom carton that makes tampering or adulteration impossible.

Try these other famous whiskies!

Police Vigilant As Dock Strike Breakers Toil

Union Men Walk Out in Higher Wage Demand; 30 Jailed.

Norfolk, Va., May 3 (AP).—Ships were loaded and unloaded by emergency crews and unemployed persons today while heavy police details in Portsmouth guarded against possible disorder as dock workers, members of the Industrial Marine Workers Union, went on strike in the Hampton Roads section.

Thirty-odd colored men were placed in jail without formal charge by Portsmouth police when a group of about 200 strikers and strike sympathizers refused to disperse at the Seaboard Air Line piers.

George W. Millner, third vice president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said in Portsmouth that the Industrial Marine Workers Union was not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and that his organization, which is affiliated with the A. F. of L., would offer every available man and facility to expedite the handling of freight.

The strike was called by the Industrial Marine Workers Union after shipping officials had declined to accede to demands for increased wages and changes in working conditions.

The number of strikers was not definitely known. Unofficial spokesmen for the workers claimed from 1,100 to 1,200 were out, but railroad and steamship figures showed from 500 to 600.

The strike affected the Southern and Seaboard Air Line piers in Portsmouth, and the Merchants & Miners, Chesapeake Line, Old Bay Line and Philadelphia & Norfolk Line here.

King Philip Treaty of 357 B. C. Founds in Ruins of Greek City

Alliance With Olynethus Previously Known by Diodorus Story.

Baltimore, May 3 (AP).—Discovery of a treaty of alliance of Philip, King of the Macedonians, in the excavations of the ancient Greek city of Olynthus was announced today at the Johns Hopkins University.

The discovery was told in a letter from Dr. David M. Robinson, professor of archeology at Johns Hopkins, who is supervising the excavating work. He found the ruins of the city in 1928 and set out on his third trip to the site last February.

The treaty, an inscription of 15 lines proclaiming the alliance of Philip with the Olynthians, had been previously known to historians only through a second-hand account given by Diodorus. The treaty was given the date of 357 B. C. Just nine years later Philip razed the city and sold its inhabitants into slavery.

Dr. Robinson reported several other new finds in his excavations, including public stores, a beautifully painted tomb and an arsenal. Five fine mosaic designs also were uncovered. Inscriptions on some of them were translated as "success to the beautiful" and "achievement is a goodly thing."

Olynthus apparently once suffered from a severe epidemic, members of the Johns Hopkins expedition related, for 30 victims of a strange malady were found buried together.

Fog Entangles Shipping, Sinks Coast Vessel

Crew in Crash Off Norfolk Climb to Safety on Survivor's Deck.

Norfolk, Va., May 3 (AP).—Fog, the dreaded enemy of seamen and aviators, today sent the motorship Emma K. Reed to the bottom, resulted in the collision of the Ida Hay Atwater and an unidentified ship, and interfered with shipping along this section of the coast.

The motorship went down stern first within 15 minutes after she was struck in a heavy fog by the Chesapeake Line steamer City of Norfolk, about a mile off Sewalls Point bell buoy in Chesapeake Bay, but Capt. W. M. Haynes, his crew of six and the one passenger on the motorship were rescued by the City of Norfolk.

The Atwater advised by radio that she was in collision with an unidentified ship in Thimble Shoal Channel, but neither vessel asked for aid. The Atwater was inbound from Providence to load cargo.

The motorship, en route to Mobjack Bay from Norfolk, suddenly loomed up in front of the City of Norfolk in a heavy fog at 6:15 a. m. and was struck on her port bow. The crew and the passenger climbed over the rail onto the City of Norfolk and a few minutes later watched their vessel sink beneath the waves.

A report of the collision was made to customs authorities by Capt. Edward James of the City of Norfolk. J. R. Raber, president of the Mobjack Bay Lines, owner of the motorship, estimated the value of the sunken vessel's cargo at $2,000, but could not estimate the value of the ship. He said another vessel would be placed in service tomorrow.

Roanoke, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—Henry F. Bausell and his son, Bernace K. Bausell, who are awaiting trial in Wythe County on a charge of killing T. Eugene Cornett near Rural Retreat, are confined in the hospital ward of Roanoke Jail.

They were acquitted in circuit court at Wytheville last Friday of a charge of murdering Virginia Cornett Bausell, wife of Bausell and daughter of Cornett, during an altercation at Cornett's home.

The younger Bausell is suffering from an infected finger while his father complains of the effects of a bullet wound in the shoulder, said to have been received during the gun fight at the Cornett home. The elder Bausell says physicians have told him that he will slowly lose the use of his arm.

The Bausells were transferred to the local jail following their acquittal at Wytheville in the first trial. Wytheville authorities denied that they feared for the Bausells' safety there.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

The "TASTE TEST" told them the truth!

It happened in one of the smartest social sets. Four guests were arguing..."A bottle of good pure liquor for so little money? It wasn't possible!"

That gave the hostess an idea. She produced four glasses, each half-filled with whisky. One glass held a bonded liquor, two others contained expensive blends, the fourth—SWEEP STAKES. Only the hostess knew what brands were in the glasses.

"Take a sip of each," she requested; "Then tell me which you like best." They sipped—they sniffed—and . . . three out of four gave first place to SWEEP STAKES!

Embassy Fete Notes Polish Anniversary

Passage of Constitution Act Celebrated by Nationals Here.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Yesterday afternoon the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska entertained at a large reception in the Embassy on Sixteenth street in celebration of the Polish national holiday.

The Ambassador, Mr. Stanislaw Patek, is absent, having gone to Havana several weeks ago to present his credentials as Minister to Cuba. In his absence the Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Sokolowska acted as hosts at the reception, to which several hundred members of official, diplomatic and resident society were invited.

The Embassy was decorated with red and white flowers, carrying out the national colors of Poland.

The Polish constitution act, which was passed on May 3, 1791, changed the Parliament from a congress of delegates of the district assemblies, bound by their instructions, into an assembly of free representatives of the nation at large. It abolished the "free vote" and established the principle of vote by majority.

Nation Possesses Most Interesting History.

Poland is the country which possesses probably one of the most interesting histories of any in Europe, and the change of government in that country have been for hundreds of years of interest to the rest of Europe.

The new constitution assured the supremacy of the lower house of Parliament over the Senate by provisions very similar to those of the Parliament bill of 1909 in Great Britain. It organized a cabinet of ministers on modern lines, and made it responsible to Parliament. Finally, it abolished the free election of each individual king, and made the throne hereditary, while at the same time it maintained and put into modern terms the constitutional limitations of royal power.

Now, under the republican form of government enjoyed by Poland, this act still holds, and yesterday's celebration was for Polish peoples throughout the world what the Fourth of July is to Americans.

In the morning the Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Sokolowska, with the members of the embassy staff and their wives, received the members of the Polish colony of Washington, and again yesterday afternoon received felicitations from Capital society.

The diplomatic corps was well represented, and among those glimpsed in the beautiful rooms of the Embassy were Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the retiring Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, —the latter, charming as always, in an ensemble of dark blue with touches of white and a smart off-the-face hat to match.

Wife of French Envoy Wears Navy Blue.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the Ambassador of France, was present, wearing a navy blue costume and a smart hat trimmed with tiny varicolored flowers. Nearby were the Air Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Champsaur, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin with her guest, Miss Lucy Martin, of Chicago.

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Dianchi and the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff Tchomokoff, were among other diplomats present, as were the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka with their daughter, Miss Nella Veverka; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite.

Mr. and Mme. Sokolawska received their guests at the head of the handsome staircase, the latter wearing a smart frock of black printed with bright red figures and trimmed with narrow bands of red, and a large black hat. She wore a scarf of handsome silver fox furs, and a corsage of gardenias.

The guests passed through the drawing rooms, some into the dining room where tea and other refreshments were served, and others to the ballroom where a buffet was spread and where the guests drank a toast to Poland and its President.

Others seen were the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close, two new and charming additions to diplomatic circles; Mrs. William Duncan Herridge, wife of the Minister of Canada, recently returned from a week-end trip to her home in Ottawa, and wearing a smart gown of beige crepe with a small brown hat.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, wore a spring ensemble of navy blue and white crepe with a hat to match, and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, was in a costume of brown satin. Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, were other members of the Cabinet present.

Mrs. Owen Roberts, Wife of Justice, Present.

Mrs. Owen J. Robers, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, wearing a dark blue ensemble with a wide-brimmed hat of dark blue taffeta, accompanied Miss Perkins.

Also present were Mrs. Fred A. Britten, wife of Representative Britten, and Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom.

Also seen were Mrs. Frank Simonds, Mrs. Robert Hinckley and her son, Mr. Robert Hinckley; Maj. and Mrs. Parker West and Mrs. Alice Nibely Smoot.

Feminine Intuition.

If the skill displayed by Miss Joyce Ryall on a hand played by her in a recent Duplicate game is any criterion, I offer the purely altruistic suggestion to the English team, which I am to play this summer, that they draft their charming compatriot into her country's service.

2—An overbid, not without merit, predicated, of course, on the hope that the first bid will have the desired result.

West, holding six clubs to the Queen-Knave, was not unnaturally suspicious and defiantly opened his fourth-best club, which Miss Ryall ducked in the Dummy and East's King won. East's failure to return the club was doubly significant, in that Miss Ryall knew, and knew that East must know, that West's Opening lead in the face of a club bid to his right definitely showed up the "psychic." The diamond Queen was led, which Miss Ryall allowed to hold; the diamond Knave was taken by the Ace, the spade eight led to the Dummy's Ace and a heart played from Dummy. East, of course, ducked and the trick was taken by the King. Miss Ryall, after due consideration, decided that West, who had followed with the heart six was not laying off with the heart Ace, for two reasons, both merely psychological, but nevertheless shrewd. First, she knew West to be a player of indifferent caliber, who had probably never refused to cash an Ace in his life; second, he had followed to the trick without the slightest hesitation. She therefore boldly took out Dummy's club Ace, on which East discarded a diamond, led another heart and East in desperation again ducking went up with her Queen and returned the third round. East, of course, led another diamond, which Miss Ryall won with the King. She now cashed her good heart, on which East was forced to discard one of his two remaining diamonds. Then, with sublime confidence, she put East in the lead with the last diamond and finessed his forced spade lead to win the last two tricks and to fulfill her contract.

Guggenheim's Guests Inspect Firenze Stable

Cocktail Party Precedes Transfer of Horses to Shows.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim entertained at a large cocktail party yesterday afternoon in the lounge of the Shoreham Saddle Club. Their guests included a group of friends interested in the Guggenheim horses.

Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim are sending their horses away today, and the party yesterday was to give their friends an opportunity to see the smart equipment of the Firenze Farms Stable before the departure.

The horses to be ridden in the National Capital Horse Show next week will go to Bradley Farms today, and the others will be sent to Atlantic City to take part in the show there May 16.

The Guggenheims will leave Washington May 14 for Atlantic City, and after the show will go to Devon, Wilmington, and West Point to show their horses before they open their summer home in Babylon, Long Island, the first week in June.

Today Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Allyn, of Montreal, Canada, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Claire Allyn, to Mr. M. Robert Guggenheim, jr., who has visited his father in Washington several times in the last few years. Mr. Guggenheim, who was graduated from Dartmouth last June, is now associated with the American Smelting & Refining Co. and is assigned to the Mexico City office where he and his bride will make their home. Mr. Guggenheim, jr., is the son of Mrs. Morton Snellenberg, of Philadelphia. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity.

Mr. Allyn, father of the bride-elect, is connected with the Montreal branch of the United States Steel Corporation.

Shoppers Take Notice — Here's Five Cent Sale

Georgetown Antique Shop Has Many Fascinating Small Pieces.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IS THERE ANYTHING more fascinating than a 5-cent sale? Surely every housewife, every shopper, every budgeteer cherishes the dream of some time picking up a treasure for almost nothing.

As a general thing her chances are few, but tomorrow it may be possible. For, when the proprietor of one Georgetown antique shop stands in the middle of his small domain he's lord of all he surveys. If he wants to put price tags of 5, 10 or 15 cents on a lot of rare old knick knacks he doesn't have to consult a junior partner, an advertising manager nor anybody, for he's all these himself.

Right now he's got a lot of these tags starting with 5 cents and ending with $1 to use tomorrow. The doors will open at 9, but the line forms on the sidewalk!

Where he gets all his bargains is a story in itself. Frequently when he's driving through Maryland or Virginia he'll chance on lovely little antiques while looking for bigger game. Sometimes he'll buy a basket load of odds and ends at an auction, and in the midst of them come across one or two rare pieces. It's like finding a pearl in an oyster shell, he says.

It's fun to visit his little shop. He has an odd and interesting assortment of things priced in a common-sense way.

Dresses for Purses.

Removal cover bags are new, smart and different. What's more, they're practical. Instead of buying half a dozen bags to match half a dozen outfits, one bag will turn the trick. One bag and half a dozen covers.

Don't miss seeing them. There are dozens of them on display in a downtown store.

The bags have zipper inside closings. The covers are linen with embroidered monograms. They're easy to wash, easy to iron. It would be simple to use the original covers as a pattern and make more to match anything in the wardrobe.

They may be purchased in pink, blue, white, maize, red, green, string color and brown.

Lots of Good Points.

There are so many attractive features to the one dollar cocktail table on sale in an F street shop it's hard to decide which is the outstanding. The wrought iron base is steady. The tile top with its vividly colored pictures of two battling roosters is extremely catching. And naturally, the price is irresistible.

We Can All Be Mae Wests.

Nowadays any woman can have the full rounded bust fashion demands. And furthermore, nobody can tell one's figure isn't as natural as Minnie Mouse's or Mae West's. All this, thanks to some new gadgets.

They have an almost uncanny lifelike quality. When they're fitted into the cups of the brassiere they give the kind of figure to brag about.

Somebody will say, "But there's bound to be a catch. Probably terrifically uncomfortable." Quite the reverse. They fit so neatly and naturally the wearer forgets she's wearing them.

Due to their quality and the way they're made they solve the perplexing problem of how to have an extra special bathing suit figure. Most suits have a way of making figures look rather flat chested, but after these affairs are slipped inside and fastened with a stitch or two even the plainest suit will be becoming. Owing to their sponge rubber construction casual pressure will eliminate all excess moisture after a swim.

They Last and Last.

When the salesman for some new perfume packs brought his wares into a shop and proudly displayed them, he insisted each one would last for five years.

The proprietor took five years and divided it by five, and decided if one of them would last even one year—a feat for most perfume packs—it was good enough merchandise for him.

They look like solidified powder. At any rate, they're a hard cake of perfumed substance, wrapped in cellophane. When the paper is removed the cake gives out a delightful fragrance. It appears one of the easiest, most effective and inexpensive ways to perfume a room or a drawer yet to appear.

There is a sizable assortment of scents—violet, carnation, lavender, rose, heliotrope, gardenia, sweet pea, orange blossom, jasmine, lilac, pine and bouquet. One pack is 15 cents. Two sell for a quarter.

Dishes From Italy.

When the buyer for the gift department in a local store put in an order for some natural colored Italian shell dishes she knew what she was about.

Ever since they came in they've been selling like the proverbial hot cakes. Their soft, creamy whiteness and unusual shape have made them as popular as they deserve. There are vases, candy jars, two-sided relish dishes and bowls.

Now Dining Is an Art, What Do Women Wear?

SIMPLICITY and dignity are the two style essentials for an informal spring dinner dress, according to Designer Lucille Dormay. Above is a sample.

Something Ladylike, by All Means, Since We're Supposed to Be a Civilized Nation Since Repeal; Informality Is a Little More Formal These Days.

EVER SINCE REPEAL there's been a great deal of fashion talk about the new wardrobe demands caused by all this dining out in hotels and restaurants.

The worldly dined out during prohibition to be sure, but in speakeasies, the only places where a bit of alcoholic Joie de Vivre could be found. And there was something about the speakeasy even at its most glorified day that didn't demand much dignity in dress. Nearly anything would do. The elite often made tweedy appearances of evenings.

But now that repeal is supposed to have made a civilized nation out of America, the only decent thing, according to the fashion copy writers, is for femininity to dignify itself up.

The ladies went at it with hammer and tongs during the fall and winter. The result was the appearance of all the glamour and glitter that had been pent up in the American woman's soul for years. Lames, velvets, all the lovely luxurious materials that could be mustered, went forth to dine in reopened hotel bars and restaurants where corks popped once again. Elegance was the style password during those months; the words chic and smart started on the way to oblivion.

It was grand during the winter. A great feminine reveling went on. Diamond tiaras came out of the strong box, and to say a woman looked like a lady didn't carry the slight connotation of prudishness that it did back in the hey-hey twenties.

Then spring showed up and with it the usual slackening of formality. Women began to carry half-formulated plans about summer clothes in their heads. And these plans did not include ideas for the grande dame type of thing—they were more apt to be for perky beach shorts or backless tennis dresses.

They Done Us Right.

But we still have to dine like civilized people—everybody says so.

So the designers set to work to overcome the newest and gravest American problem. They have done right by the gals, too. The pictured lady in the big hat is a good example of what their labors have come to.

This sort of printed dress is not top heavy with glamour and elegance. It is simple and definitely not frou-frou. But it can go anywhere to dine where formal evening clothes are not expected with its wearer secure in the knowledge she looks as well as the next girl, if not several degrees better.

So feast your eyes on it ladies. It's emblematic of the best thing for your informal afternoons and dinners. Also pay attention to the hat. It's not fashion news—you've been hearing about big hats for at least a month—but a fashion rule. Very few small hats are dining out now. And if you want to cling to a bit of the winter's elegance nothing is better than an alluring cartwheel, the bigger the more correct.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Diets for Certain Diseases.

In writing of disorders of the colon Dr. S. W. Patterson gives the following as the constipating foods: Milk, cocoa, chocolate, tea, red wines, broths, meat extracts, meats, fish, eggs, fine white bread, rice and other starchy foods, jelly and gelatin.

There are several colon disorders. One is spastic colon. In the treatment of spastic colon a bland or soft diet is used. Dr. Patterson gives the following as a sample of the bland diet he makes use of:

Breakfast: Milk flavored with fruit juice, toast, egg, fish, and butter.

Noon meal: Fowl, boiled fish, broiled mutton, mashed potato, cauliflower, asparagus tips, milk, pudding.

Supper: Macaroni, rice instead of vegetables, milk pudding.

These are reasonably good diets, but there are persons who would be disappointed in using them. The fact is, there is a great diversity in the reaction of people to certain foods. We start with milk, the first item in the constipating diet. Persons on a strict milk diet not infrequently must discontinue the treatment because the diet causes diarrhea. Milk of itself is not constipating nor is it laxative. Since most of it is absorbed and but little residue is left it may have a slight, indirect tendency to cause constipation, but, as we have seen, it occasionally acts as a laxative. Where milk has been soured, the newly developed acid will usually have a laxative action if enough is used.

Meat is given in all the lists. As a matter of fact, the protein part of meat, whether it be beef, mutton, fish, fowl or eggs, is digested or absorbed before the colon is reached and has no effect either way. But if the meat is stringy, containing much tendon and stringy matter, such portions may reach the colon and may cause irritation to a spastic colon. Therefore the choice lies not between beef and mutton, but between tender meat and stringy, tough meat.

In the field of starchy foods circumstances alter cases. The starchy foods are gassy. Gas of itself tends to cause a laxative action. Certain persons are constipated because of insufficiency of gas. On the other hand, the effects may be bad. The most consistently laxative foods are the fats, oils and greases, including butter, cream, oils, salad dressings and fat meats. However, again there must be individualization.

That form of halitosis in which the breath has a sweetish odor is largely so as a result of aromatic products made out of fats. When people write of having halitosis due to digestive conditions they very often add: "The reason I am not constipated is that I eat lots of fats and grease." If they ate less fats they might be constipated, but they would have less halitosis.

It is not a good idea to accept anybody's diet tables without taking into consideration one's own peculiarities.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

A Bourgeois Dish, Corned Beef, Can Be Made Aristocratic.

By Susan Mills.

THE DISH OF the nations—corned beef—is justifiably a popular one. Whether you buy it in a can or from your butcher it can be made a truly aristocratic morsel in spite of its bourgeois price.

Try this recipe.

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Wash the meat, if fresh, in cold water, then cover with cold water and bring slowly to a boil. As soon as the water boils reduce heat, add a few peppercorns, and continue slow cooking (always below boiling point) until meat is tender. At least 1 hour of cooking will be required to each pound of beef. Keep meat closely covered during cooking.

When the meat is done cut cabbage into quarters and cook in some of the stock, diluted with water if needed, for 15 to 20 minutes. Keep corned beef hot and, when cabbage is done, slice, rub with butter and serve. Garnish with parsley sprigs or pickle rings. The leftover meat that is to be served cold should be put in the stock to cool.

Corned Beef Croquettes.

Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; add 2 cups of mashed potatoes and ¼ cup of cream and stir until well mixed and heated. Add 3 cups of finely chopped cold corned beef and salt and pepper to taste. Take from the stove, add 1 tablespoon of chopped parsley and 1 egg—beaten light without separating. Mix well and put away to cool. When cold, form into croquettes, cover with egg and bread crumbs, and fry in deep hot fat. Serve hot with a tart jelly.

Three Women Rival to Lose Excess Pounds

Bananas and Milk Chief Foods in Diet for the Heavyweight.

CHICAGO, May 3 (Spl.).—Three women here, a lightweight, middleweight and heavyweight, are competing in a 30-day diet derby. Their goal is a loss of two pounds daily.

The diets were supervised by City Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen. The principal components of two of the diets are bananas and milk.

The women taking part in the derby are Deon Craddock, 140-pounds; Alice Joy, 144-pounds, and Felicia Terry, 165-pounds.

This diet will be alternated every two weeks with another two-week diet prescribed by Dr. Bundesen. The alternating diet is more liberal and contains coffee and tea but no cream and sugar.

A banana and milk diet also is being used for Miss Terry, the heavyweight. However, she is allowed to vary it with a little spinach, liver and other foods. Her first day's schedule was as follows:

Breakfast—two bananas and one glass of skimmed milk.

Luncheon—Two bananas, one glass skimmed milk and small serving of spinach.

Dinner—Two bananas, glass skimmed milk and small serving of liver.

The diet for Miss Craddock, the lightweight was devised by Dr. Bundesen. It is as follows:

Brenkfast—Cup orange juice, 2 slices toast, ½ tablespoon butter and 6 ounces of milk.

Luncheon — Vegetable bouillon, lettuce and tomato salad and 6 ounces milk.

Dinner—Small serving lean roast beef, 1 serving peas, 1 slice whole wheat bread, ½ tablespoon butter, ½ baked apple with ½ tablespoon sugar and 6 ounces milk.

What Today Means

"Taurus"

If May 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 8 a. m., 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m.

In your social or business contacts on this date, guard against allowing envy or jealousy to become an influenceing factor in any of your actions. Either of these undesirable traits dominates a person only when given power to do so by allowing the mind to develop an unwholesome longing for something possessed by another. It will be advisable to express gratification if you learn that a friend has had a bit of good luck.

The woman born on May 4 has the happy faculty of being able to be congenial with a large variety of people, and readily grasps, with sympathetic understanding, their various viewpoints. You will be very successful if some of your time is devoted to settlement or social welfare work. The educational field also offers vast possibilities to anyone who can so readily understand the emotional promptings back of the mental attitude of children. Avoid allowing the problems of others to occupy your thoughts to the exclusion of joyous happenings which will occur in your own life.

The child born on May 4, when it is old enough to attend school, should have impressed upon it the importance of showing its teachers the greatest amount of respect. The child must be made to understand there will be no parental interference with whatever rulings its teachers see fit to make. Entirely too often children are given the impression that all they have to do is to complain at home regarding some school discipline for the parent to enter a protest. It is only fair to the child, as well as the teachers, that outsiders refrain from interfering with the workings of the schoolroom, which, as a rule, they know nothing about.

The woman born on May 4, being of conservative habits, and as a general thing being inclined to lead a sane and sensible life, will make comparatively few mistakes as time passes, and will find a great deal of happiness in her home. Married life is the logical one for women born on this date, although those who prefer single bliss lead a very happy existence, and if engaged in a business career have satisfactory results.

The man born on May 4 has a likable personality, makes friends readily, and is a consistently hard-working individual. If born on May 4, do not speculate, for people born on this date are not as a rule successful in gambling ventures. If this is your natal day play the game according to the rules laid down by conservative business methods.

Successful people born on May 4:

John James Audubon, ornithologist.

William H. Prescott, historian.

Horace Mann, educator.

Charles W. Upham, author.

I WAS A SPY!

By MARTHE McKENNA

What Has Gone Before.

Marthe Cnockaert McKenna, Belgian woman, served as a British secret agent during the World War. In previous installments of this fascinating autobiography, she told of the German invasion of her country. She became attached as a nurse to a German military hospital. Then—she became a spy. A young German officer flirted with her and when he took out his notebook she read that an ordnance train was on its way. She sends the message that results in the destruction of the train. She is unnerved by the toll of lives.

MY heart stopped a beat. One lone white speck was hovering in those relentless beams of light in the sky. One aeroplane? I could not believe my eyes But after watching for a few minutes I was certain that was all. It seemed madness to send just a single machine in the face of that raging, tearing hurricane of German shot. I found myself shivering with apprehension out upon the cold windswept pavement. The idiots—the fools—why had they taken a thousand to one chance instead of making certain?

Suddenly that white speck plunged earthward. It had been hit. It was hurtling to destruction on our very heads. The chorus of guns swelled to a deep diapason, men were cheering all round me. Then, miraculously, the zooming plane flattened out with a roar just as it seemed about to crumple against the housetops. Above the shriek of the shells sounded a deep thud, but still that ordnance train waited unscathed.

Town Wrapped in Flame.

A vast sheet of flame silhouetted the whole town in its glare. The atmosphere quivered, and a thundering detonation hurled me against the wall. The air seemed raining stones, slates avalanched from the roofs upon the pavements, all Roulers was shaking, and there was the tinkling of falling glass from a thousand windows. Men in the street screamed and threw themselves face downward. Then followed explosion after explosion, and the staccato pop of myriads of detonating rifle bullets. That last bomb had struck the ordnance train fair and square. Two score roofs in Roulers were torn off in that maelstrom of destruction!

From where I lay in the doorway I watched breathlessly as the raiding plane twisted and turned as it climbed back to the clouds. From its tail streamed a tongue of red fire, broadening, brightening. It wavered, then spiraled headlong downward, smashing into the ground at 100 m. p. h. The play was over. In the dawn two British airmen were found still breathing, but smashed and unconscious. They had done their job, and for them nothing more mattered, save a short interval of agony before the final peace. The machine was a twisted, blackened mass of steel, wood and canvas, a poor wreck of the monarch that such a short time before had ridden the clouds.

I had succeeded in my small part. Then I remembered those lads, burned and broken, who but for me and my warnings would not have crashed to the earth with their machine in a holocaust of flame. As I crept upstairs I was thinking of the smoking ruins of the station, and of the fate of my little German officer friend of the Railway Transport. The groans of the mangled Germans whom I knew must lie thick about the station seemed ringing in my ears. I threw myself on my bed, turned my face to the wall and wept as though my heart was breaking.

For three days after that the nights were a torture, interspersed with bouts of feverish nightmare in which I wandered along an endless street of smoking ruins where the way was strewn with mingled corpses whose glassy eyeballs watched me accusingly. At the hospital I jumped at every unfamiliar sound, my hands trembled and I dragged myself about as if in a dream. The Oberartz gave me more tonics and several times urged me to go home, where he offered personally to come and examine me. But I knew that to spend my days lying in bed would give me leisure to think those terrible thoughts, and I insisted upon continuing, for in time I knew I would conquer my weakness and become resolute once again.

It was upon the afternoon of the fourth day that I overheard a conversation in the passage-way outside the half-open door of my ward. It was the Oberartz speaking:

"This is the devil . . . Lichienstein of No. 3 Advanced Dressing Station mortally wounded. He was a splendid fellow, I am truly sorry—but it is all very well for the brigade to order me to supply a temporary relief. Aufrecht and Nagle went to No. 8 Hospital this

Women Must Realize Concentration Necessary for Greatness, Says Voters' Head

They Shouldn't Flit From Cause To Cause, Is Her View About It

Margaret Wells Started in League of Women Voters After Leaving College and Has Worked at It Ever Since to the Exclusion of Almost Everything Else.

GREATNESS IS ACHIEVED by concentrated effort. Because women have failed to realize this, few of them have risen above mediocrity.

Brown eyes shining in her animated face, Miss Marguerite Wells, of Minneapolis, new president of the National League of Women Voters, pointed this out yesterday, as she leaned across her desk at the league's headquarters.

Should Concentrate.

"American women should stop flitting about from one cause to another, and concentrate their energies on the one thing they can do best," Miss Wells asserted. "But because they are afraid they will become narrow or fail to make interesting contacts, they join all kinds of clubs, scatter their efforts and accomplish nothing. They must learn no worthwhile cause narrows a person, and there is no public interest that doesn't lead to richer, higher levels of its own."

Small in stature, patrician in appearance and notable in achievement, is this woman who recently assumed leadership of the group which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt led as the Woman's National Suffrage Association, and which when the ballot was obtained reorganized as the National League of Women Voters.

Miss Well's election as National president at the league's recent convention in Boston, was the reward of 14 years of concentrated effort in its behalf. She succeeds Miss Belle Sherwin, president for ten years.

"I started working in this organization soon after my graduation from Smith College," she explained, "because I knew it was someone's job to make women take a consistent, constant interest in public affairs, and it looked as if it were my job. I have worked at it almost to the exclusion of everything else."

Miss Wells believes one of the things the world is rapidly outgrowing is the idea there are certain jobs meant for men and certain jobs for women. She would by no means relegate married women to the home in the interest of economic necessity.

No Barrier.

"A person should do what he or she is best adapted to do," she said. "And I do not think artificial barriers should be raised to prevent this. I also believe the day is passed when we must talk about legislation affecting men as men and women as women. We are learning to think in terms of human beings, not of sexes.

"Certainly there is a place for women in public life. It doesn't matter whether they are actively engaged in the business or professional world or work at home, every person is interested in public affairs. Sometimes I think experience in homemaking fits a woman for public service better than experience in business. For after all, government is just a sort of homemaking on a large scale. The purpose of both home and government is to make people happy nd provide for their comfort."

Denying women were more emotional than men in their attitude toward politics and public affairs, Miss Wells pointed out the only difference was in the way the emotions were displayed.

"Men are just as emotional as women about public affairs," she said. "The difference is in temperament. But please don't think I am discrediting emotion. I believe nothing great was ever done because of intellectual stimulus alone. It is strong emotions that make us act, that make us accomplish things."

The League of Women Voters does not content itself with setting up abstract ideals, Miss Wells explained.

"The National organization sets up certain standards," she said, "and the local groups support those laws which are in accordance with our ideals," she explained. "Last year we worked for and obtained 560 legislations for civic betterment."

MISS MARGUERITE WELLS, of Minneapolis, newly elected president of the National League of Women Voters, regrets that the American woman's fear of becoming narrow and not making interesting contacts, causes her to scatter her energies, when by concentration she might achieve greatness.

Drama Critics Split Over Harvard Play

Radcliffe Girls Forbidden to Play in It.

Boston, May 3 (U.P.).—Boston dramatic critics were divided today as to the merits of "A Bride for the Unicorn" as presented by the Harvard Dramatic Club in Brattle Hall, Cambridge, last night.

The play attracted wide notice because Miss Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, recently said the feminine roles were "unfit" for her students and forbade their participation. Several Boston girls, some of them social leaders, were substituted.

Declaring the play was "composed of a series of insanely devised parables and attempted symbolism," the Boston Post said "whatever the author (Denis Johnston) was trying to say was somehow lost in the saying." The Post said Miss Comstock, in barring Radcliffe girls from the cast, probably was prompted by a fear "for the strain upon their sanity."

The Boston Herald thought the club did "a really effective job."

I would like to mix a potion
Strong, insidiously sweet,
So that after you had sipped it

I would plan and test the mixture,
Making it a surer brew

Shall it be one lump or two?

Alexandria's Old Homes Will Open Tomorrow

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"TO THE CITY OF ALEXANDRIA, may her prosperity and happiness more and more realize the fondest hopes of our venerated Washington." So went a toast given by Lafayette on his second memorable visit to this country.

Visitors to Alexandria tomorrow will have the opportunity to glimpse interiors of houses that aroused Lafayette's enthusiasm and merited Washington's approbation. Historic homes of the ancient town will be open to the public under the auspices of the Rector's Aid of St. Paul's Church.

Colonial homes erected as far back as 1775, quaint flounder houses that still preserve an atmosphere of the past, a church patterned after one of Sir Christopher Wren's masterpieces, and a number of residences with mellowed pine paneling and antiques—all these landmarks will reproduce for the visitor the Alexandria of the Fairfaxes, Ramsays and Carlyles, who built stately residences near the city while the flag of England still floated from public buildings and resplendent birthnight balls were given in honor of the king and queen.

One of the most interesting houses in the town stands on the corner of St. Asaph and Duke streets. Built by Benjamin Dulaney, to be used as his town house, it was once the social center of Alexandria.

erection was a matter of conjecture, but when the residence was renovated last summer documents pertaining to the building and bearing the date of February, 1785, were found in partitions of the third story.

Now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Horner, this trim, gray house has many distinctions. From its steps Gen. Lafayette made an address on his second visit to this country. Some of the trees in its yard are offsprings from those fringing Unter den Linden in Berlin; Baron von Steuben brought over some shoots on his return to America and presented them to the owner of the house.

Another landmark scheduled for display on the tour is the home occupied by Maj. and Mrs. Charles Barrett, which boastts an old-fashioned flower garden containing 85-year-old plants.

Gracious Interiors.

The magic of the name of Robert E. Lee still clings around the residence of Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Sayers on Oronoco street, for it was here the famous general lived as a boy soon after the death of his father, Light Horse Harry Lee.

The quiet graciousness and harmonizing decorations of the home of Senator and Mrs. Henry Keyes on North Alfred street, Mr. Edward Van Devanter's residence with its quaint corner mantelpieces and unique stairway, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin George with its delightful old pine and maple pieces, and the singular brick home of Mr. and Mrs. Northcut Ely with its fascinating overhanging gallery—all these will be seen by the visitor.

From 10 to 1 in the morning and from 2 to 5 in the afternoon the houses will be open to the public. Admission will be paid at the first home visited and tea will be served from 4 to 6 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett, where Richard Bland Lee, uncle of Robert E. Lee, formerly lived.

First Timepieces, Sun Dials, Came Out of Egypt, Arabia

SUN DIALS, with their mottoes and romantic legends were the first instruments used for marking the time. They were abundant in ancient Egypt, Greece, Italy, Arabia and China, but in the countries dominated by the Mohammedan religion the sand-filled hour glass was the most favored.

When you travel northward to European countries where sunshine is intermittent, as in England, the ingenuity of man was stimulated to mark the time by ways other than the sun. London with its thick, yellow fogs and drizzling rains became the center of the clock-making industry.

The word "clock" sounds much alike in many languages. In German it is "glocke;" in French, "cloche;" the Chinese call it "glog," and in the Netherlands, "kloke." It was well into the fourteenth century before the word "clock" came into general use. Until then it meant the bell which struck the hour.

Some of the more famous of the early clocks are in France and Germany. In the charming old City of Rouen, in France, where time seems to move more slowly than in other places, the old clock tower—made in 1389—is still a most picturesque and accurate timepiece. In Germany the clock at Strasbourg has long been a point of pilgrimage for travelers abroad.

The oldest self-striking clock in the world is in Wells Cathedral, in England. . . . It has fascinating devices which show the hours of the day, the age of the moon, the position of the planets and the rise and fall of the tides. This is an example of connection between time and astronomy, which has always been very close. The dial is divided into 24 hours and shows the phases of the moon and a map of the heavens.

Clocks, challenges to the artistry and imagination of some of the world's greatest craftsmen, have been chosen as royal gifts from the time of their earliest invention. Individuality has found expression in the various unique and curious ones designed as gifts between nations.

In America the town clock was an active institution—its expense taken care of by the town—and shared by the people. The decline of the town clock began when every family had its individual timepiece . . . perhaps there were certain ties of fellowship which bound the ancient villages which were symbolized by the town clock. And some of it has been lost in this era of self-sufficiency.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. They should pour out thru the bladder 3 pints of fluid a day which contains 4 pounds of waste matter.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Blind Persons Not Miserable. Maintains One

This Sightless Woman Is First to Earn Ph. D. While Blind.

NEW YORK, May 3 (Spl.).—Blindness, conceived by most persons as one of the worst physical afflictions, has its compensations.

While those who can not see must depend upon the help of others and have difficulty in adjusting themselves, they miss many unpleasant sights and have a better chance to think than those whose eyes continually scan the whirling world.

Such is the theory of Miss Gertrude Brown, of Dayton, Ohio, who has been totally blind since childhood, and who will receive the degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia University in June.

The thesis for her doctorate, entitled "Milton's Blindness," announced recently by the Columbia University Press, points out Milton's "Paradise Lost," sets forth the blessings of blindness rather than its deprivations.

Selecting a passage from Milton's masterpiece, Miss Brown discusses the poet's reference to "darkness" in her thesis as follows:

"'In darkness' is perhaps a more poetic way of saying he was blind, but I find myself connecting this passage with the early days of the Restoration, when Milton, knowing the fate of Vane and others, awaited the decision of Parliament with reference to his own case. His anxiety was probably further augmented by the fact that, to the blind, escape is almost impossible. It was not blindness 'darkness,' but the perturbation caused by the feeling of inevitability which would most concern him."

Returning to her defense of blindness in general, Miss Brown concludes in her thesis as follows:

"It is not miserable to be blind. It is inconvenient. The blind need to exert undue patience with reference to their affliction, since on account of their dependency their lives are closely knit with their helpers. The blind make the adjustment to their handicap perhaps as happily as any group of afflicted people. While blindness is not the lightest burden, it appears heavier to the sighted world than to the blind themselves."

Receiving her elementary and secondary education at the Ohio State School for the Blind, Miss Brown later attended the Ohio State University, receiving the degree of bachelor of arts after 3½ years of study.

Now 46, Miss Brown is reputed to be the first woman to earn the doctor of philosophy degree while blind.

There's Need For Servants, Says Expert

New York, May 3 (Spl.).—There are still two pursuits for women that are not overcrowded — homemaking and housework—according to Mrs. Alexander M. Hadden, president of the Girls' Service League of America.

Mrs. Hadden, speaking at a meeting of the league's New York council, said the demand exceeded the supply in all kinds of home service. She predicted the expansion of girls' summer schools for training in homemaking and housework.

The largest age group for girls in domestic service is between 16 and 22, according to Mrs. Hadden.

A Connoisseur of Persian Art Interprets Its Glowing Colors

A Layman Sits Entranced as Dr. Ali Kula Khan Explains the Religious Origin of the Shades in His Collection of Rugs, Shawls, Pottery.

By Evelyn Voss Wise.

IN THE HOME of Dr. and Mrs. Ali Kula Khan is a most inspiring collection of Persian art. To the person who knows little about rare miniatures, signed rugs, excavated tiles and pottery, it is at once outstanding because of the colors; the lucid blue of summer skies, the greens of growing things, the gold of summer sunshine, dark blue of deep oceans and the pure crimson of blooming flowers.

I had made an appointment with Dr. Khan to see these beautiful things, as any one may do, and I was interested in his explanations.

"Why," I asked him, "did they use these colors? Is there a meaning to them?"

Here's the Story.

"Won't you be seated?" the scholarly Persian gentleman said. "There is a story . . . I have made a lifetime study of the symbolism and philosophical design and color, and have gained a key to the interpretation of the esoteric side of Persian art. I will tell you all about it."

I seated myself beneath a dark blue quilted tapestry and beside a manuscript bound and decorated by artists hundreds of years ago. Sunshine, the object of Persian worship many generations before me, flooded the room and caught lights from a shawl which an entire family had spent perhaps ten years of their lives in making.

"Thousands of years ago," he began, "the Persians believed in one God—a God who had many names and as many attributes. The Persian artist sought in the gardens of his country for symbols to express the qualities of the supreme being, and in the garden fields of nature he found them. From the cypress tree, with its everlasting green foliage, he took the symbol of everlasting life, and thus the tree of life meant a prophet or world teacher. In the rose bush, too, were qualities of the great spirit—fragrance, the loving attributes of God. So in Persian religion the rose, or crimson, became the national flower, and green continued to be the greatest spiritual symbol.

"The first artist used these two as a working base, and as time passed he included the birds and the beasts to share this design of god. Hence the floral design formed the principal pattern in Persian art.

"Early artists sought for various colors in the same gardens, fields and forests, and eventually became adept in the use of vegetable colorings. But there were only certain hues they desired—colors that would express the salient attributes of God."

"These attributes?" I interrupted.

Loftiness and Love.

"First," he said, "was loftiness, the turquoise blue of the sky. Then profundity, the dark blue depths of deep water. Third, the love of God, or fire, whose shades were red, rose and crimson. The glory of the Omnipotent was the sun, expressed in the radiance of orange or gold and yellow; and the fifth, God's creative energy was depicted in the shades of green, the growth in pastures, meadows, and gardens."

"The shawls for which Persia is famous were of all-over floral design in various colors or sometimes with a wide plain center. Often the Shah bestowed them as marks of honor upon grandees and courtiers who had performed distinctive services. Sometimes they were made into great coats called 'jobbeh' which the Shahs gave to their favorites as a 'Taupoosh,' meaning such an article was from the Shah's own private wardrobe. The shawls and ceremonial tapestries which one finds at the present time in museums have descended from these sources.

"An interesting event is the announcing of a marriage betrothal. It is performed by the presentation of a shawl and ring by the parents of the bridegroom-elect. This ties the primary knot and the announcing of the engagement in the Western world is spoken of in Persia as the pair were 'shawled and ringed.'" morning, and their reliefs have not arrived, so that we are shorthanded already. Sudermann is down with pneumonia, and is out of the question. There remains only myself. How can I leave the hospital without one single doctor?——"

I WAS A SPY! - - - By MARTHE McKENNA

"Have you not an Unter-offizier who could deputize for a doctor temporarily, Herr Oberartz?" suggested an unfamiliar voice.

"It seems the only way. But you understand, Herr Hauptmann, an Unter-offizier, although an excellent dresser, has in no sense the training and understanding of a doctor. Nor can he under any circumstances perform an urgent operation."

The idea seemed to strike me like a flash of lightning. Almost before I knew it I found myself out in the passage facing the Oberartz and a Staff-Hauptmann.

Volunteers for Duty.

"Herr Oberartz," I said, "I will work at the advanced dressing-station till the relief comes. I had completed much of my training as a medical student when war broke out. I am far better qualified than is any noncommissioned officer."

"Impossible, Fraulein," sentenced the Oberartz, "you are a woman!" and the Staff-Hauptmann gaped.

"This is a case of emergency," I put in. "I have volunteered of my own free will to go. My sex has nothing to do with it."

"Up at the advanced dressing-stations it is no joke, Fraulein. You realize you will be in constant danger?"

"I shall be ready whenever you wish me to go." The Oberartz bowed. "I thank you, Fraulein," he said quietly.

"I shall, of course, report your conduct at Brigade, Fraulein," offered the Hauptmann, shaking my hand. Then he saluted and hurried away to his other duties.

An hour later I sat beside the driver of a battered ambulance, muffled in a German military greatcoat, while rain lashed against the cracked wind screen, and we ploughed and rocked through the soupy mire of an execrable country road toward the ever-loudening rumble of gunfire. An express train seemed to shriek overhead, followed by a dull roar behind us.

"First shell to welcome us," laughed the driver. "The Allies seem to be taking it easy this afternoon. I hope for your sake they continue to do so, Fraulein."

A few minutes later we splashed to a standstill in a little shattered wood. "Advanced Dressing Station, No. 3," read a dirty white signboard over the wide sandbagged mouth of a dugout in the bank of the roadside. I remember well noticing two solitary snowdrops sprouting side by side in that desolate bank as I stepped from the footboard into the mud. "Good luck, Fraulein," shouted the driver, through the curtain of driving rain, and then he threw in his clutch and rattled away. A medical feldwebel met me in the entrance with a salute. "The Herr Oberartz of the hospital phoned saying you would arrive, Fraulein. This is a hell of a place, I'm afraid. But we do the best we can. Sometimes we work day and night without a break, but temporarily there is a lull up in front." We descended the slimy stairs.

Overwhelmed by Stench.

A sickening stench of blood, disinfectant and stale perspiration greeted my nostrils. Two central hurricane lamps hanging low over a rough kitchen table, wet with ominous stains, lit a large dugout with boarded walls. Four corpses covered with overcoats lay stretched in a far corner, and opposite squatted three medical orderlies laughing and smoking. A gefreiter, who from the state of his clothing might have been a slaughter house assistant, stopped whistling and, rising from the case of dressings he was checking, touched his cap. A very muddy British soldier, whose naked chest was swathed in bandages, and an equally filthy German, with a great white turban on his head, watched me from their place against the blood-splashed wall. The feldwebel pulled forward a box.

"Sit down, Fraulein," he invited. "A lot of noise has started up overhead. I think perhaps we shall have some work to do before long. I daresay you are hungry?" He thrust a lump of bread with a large slice of tinned meat into my hand, and called to an orderly to get me a mug of coffee from a small stove in the corner.

"I'm not hungry, thanks," I remonstrated.

"Better eat now—must have strength—and maybe you'll not feel much like eating when the cases begin to arrive."

Voices and splashing footsteps sounded outside.

"Here they come," ejaculated the feldwebel, cheerfully wiping his long moustache. "Nor, get moving, lads." The orderlies rose, stamped out their cigarettes and, rolling up their sleeves, went to the foot of the steps.

All through the night the Allies shelled heavily and the wounded continued to dribble in, tattered wretches smeared with mud and blood using their rifles as crutches, men staggering arm in arm, singing as if drunk, groping men with bandaged eyes, and those screaming wrecks of humanity lowered down the steps by the slithering, swearing, perspiring stretcher-bearers. Now and then as a man lay on the table to be dressed or probed or amputated, a shell pounded the ground above, and earth and stones rained down into the open wounds of the writhing patients. A man yelled for morphia, and other sufferers took up the cry till it became a continual wail.

"There is no morphia here, Fraulein," the feldwebel answered my inquiry. "Why, if we gave all the men morphia who asked for it, we should need great tanks of it!" He took a hypodermic syringe and filled it from a bottle of liquid labeled "Morphia." "This answers as well in most cases," he said in passing and proceeded to make injections into the sufferers, prominently displaying the labeled bottle the while. At once the moans quieted and many lay still.

"What is in the bottle?" I asked him.

"Water," he told me in an undertone.

I thought about little except the task in hand, and hardly noticed how the time flew. About dawn the feldwebel brought me enough spirits in a mug to make me unconscious under normal circumstances. As it was I hardly noticed the effect. I was covered with dirt from the ceiling, and my forehead was bleeding where a stone splinter had struck me. Two memories alone stand out clearly during those suffocating hours in the dressing station. One was the conduct of the British soldier with the bandaged chest who had been propped up aganist the dugout wall when I entered, and the other was the entrance of the "Scot."

Soldier Demands Help.

The Englishman was a cheery little rubicund man with his cap at the back of his head. He whiled away the time droning on a tiny mouth organ, and smoking cigarettes, of which he seemed to have an endless supply in his pockets.

In the hustle to evacuate the German wounded he was taken little notice of, and when men who had been attended to were from time to time helped up the steps to the waiting ambulance he shouted hoarsely, "'Ere, you're forgettin' me, aren't yer?" A complaint which nobody understood except myself, and he had roared it out five times before I could grasp his meaning. After each of his unsuccessful vocal efforts, the little man smiled to himself philosophically, and just to show that in spite of it all he bore no ill-will to the Huns, invariably offered the men laid beside him a cigarette and shot remarks at them in "pidgin" English, even if they were on the point of death.

A German lieutenant of slim and haughty appearance was waiting to have his badly shattered hand dressed, and was standing near the Englishman. The lieutenant flicked his gold cigarette case from his tunic pocket and found it empty. The British "Tommy" saw this. He tapped the lieutenant's well-fitting fieldboot with a grimy hand.

"'Ere," he invited thrusting up a paper packet, "take one of these, sir."

The lieutenant's eyes flashed. "What—you swine," he hissed. "Don't speak to me like that," and he kicked "Tommy" savagely on the leg "Tommy" withdrew his despised packet quietly.

"Crickey," he said, "you're a real gentleman, you are. Well, yer don't object if Fritz here and I has a smoke, do yer?" The young officer obviously understood and was seething with rage, when fortunately the arrival of the "Scot" who had slipped from half-way down the soggy dugout steps with an oath of pain, and much clatter, brought all eyes in his direction. It was my first sight of a Highland soldier, and I thought at first he had lost his trousers. A long, cadaverous man with very dirty, bony knees, blue chin and a fantastic cap tipped over one eye he sat nursing a heavily bandaged foot and leg, whilst he surveyed the scene before him with mournful disgust.

Scot Waxes Indignant.

"Hullo, Scotty," hailed the "Tommy." "Come and take a seat over 'ere. Ceiling's leakin' over this part, so it's makin' the floor nice and soft to sit on." The Scot replied in his strange northern patois but never relaxed a muscle of his face. He was excessively respectful to me when I dressed his foot, and when I addressed him in English he broke into a long and dreary story quite unintelligible to me which obviously filled him with great indignation. But while he was talking an idea entered my head. Why could I not contrive the escape of such British prisoners as were brought to the hospital by smuggling them over the frontier into Holland, which was not far distant?

It was 9 o'clock next evening, and under the moon the dim countryside stretched away a shadowy blue as I bumped back toward Roulers, while the Scot wedged between me and the ambulance driver groaned at every jolt. The Allies were "putting stuff over," and now and again a moaning shriek heralded a vivid flash and concussion in the fields to our right and left. Suddenly the air seemed palpitating, searing flame enveloped us, the windscreen leaped from its frame into our faces, and mid a thunderous detonation, the ambulance lurched quivering to one side and turned over in the ditch. For a moment I scarcely breathed, hardly sure that I was alive, then the frantic struggling of some one on top of me who kept muttering, "Jesus Chrrrist, Jesus Chrrrist," told me that wherever I was the Scot was still with me. He dragged himself free with grunts of pain, and helped me out. The moon looked down as we gazed round the quiet landscape. A jagged hole yawned in the road. The driver, an Alsatian named Alphonse whom I was to know better later, had been hurled clear and lay in a dazed but otherwise unharmed condition in the road.

The medical orderly crawled from the back of the vehicle, and the three of us without a word started groping in the tumbled interior for those invisible, moaning stretcher-cases. When we brought them out into the road, one man lay limp and still. We readjusted the dressings of the others, then stood looking at each other wondering what we should do next. The Scot drew my attention to the fact that I was bleeding badly from the shoulder and left wrist, and I saw that both forearms were scratched and scored, because I had raised my arms to ward off the shattered glass when the explosion came. The orderly had just tied me up roughly with the aid of a first-field dressing-packet which the Scot had produced from a pocket, when the sound of distant marching reached us. Presently a silent battalion trugded past, going up the line. The adjutant stopped and inquired what had happened and ordered a cyclist to hurry to Roulers for help.

By 10:30 p. m. my charges were safely in bed in the hospital and feeling happier than I had been for days, despite injuries and tiredness, for I felt that I had in some measure atoned for the part I had played in the terrible raid on the station, I went to the dispensary to have my hurts properly dressed. While an orderly was doing this there was a commotion in the main hall into which the dispensary opened. Two military policemen carried in a civilian who was breathing in great whistling gasps.

"Found him in a ditch, Fraulein," one of the soldiers explained. "Some one has been trying to cut his throat." The man was nearly dead from loss of blood already and I sent an orderly for the night surgeon. Meanwhile I tried to ease the man as much as possible. In doing this my eyes were suddenly caught by something that flashed on the inner lapel of his coat, which had been rucked up. Two steel safety pins were fixed there. But they ran straight and not diagonally!

"Do you know who this man is?" I asked the military policemen who were standing watching.

"Yes, Fraulein," came the answer, "that's Schneider, of the police. He has been on special work for some weeks now."

When I returned home the stranger, who had rarely spoken to me since that first night, was seated, pipe in mouth, alone in the kitchen, and with feet propped up on the stove was unlacing his muddy boots.

"A 'safety pin man,' whose pins were straight and not diagonal, was brought in with his throat cut tonight," I told him.

The stranger paused, then pulled off his boot and laid it on the fender.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Jay Bird Comes Back

The next morning after the cubs got their ducking from the flying kites, Blackie was loafing around on the porch, doing nothing in particular, while the others were out in front of the house playing leap-frog and other frolicking games. Blackie was wondering what in the world had happened to Jay Bird, for he was sure there had been plenty of time for him to go to Bear Creek and be back long before now.

Bettie came out and asked Blackie what he was looking so worried about, and he told her he was worried about Jay Bird and was afraid that Mr. Man or Uncle Joe had found out that he was Blackie's friend and had killed him. Bettie told Blackie that he must remember that the day before had been awfully windy and she doubted if Jay Bird had even tried to fly on such a day. Blackie thought that maybe that was the reason, but still he couldn't help feeling uneasy and he wished Jay Bird would come back.

While Blackie thought lots of all his friends, away down in his heart he loved Jay Bird the best, for it was Jay Bird that first welcomed him to Bear Creek and showed him the nice house; it was Jay Bird who had gone for Dr. Coon when Blackie was sick, and it was Jay Bird that let him out of that awful circus cage. No wonder he loved Jay Bird, and he just couldn't bear the thought of anything happening to him; so he kept on walking up and down the porch. Every now and then he would stand up on his hind legs and look as far as he could down the mountain.

Away long toward dinner time, when Bettie had gone back to the kitchen to put on her dinner, Blackie sat down on the steps and put his head down on his paws and looked mighty lonesome. But he hadn't been sitting there long when he heard somebody laughing, "Ha-ha-ha," just like he couldn't stop. Blackie jumped up and listened. Again he heard "Ha-ha-ha-ha" louder than before. It sounded a good deal like Jay Bird, only he had never heard him laugh like that.

Then out of the big chestnut tree came Jay Bird with a swoop and lit on the shelf right at Blackie's head. Blackie jumped up, hit his heels together, said "Woof, woof, woof!" and then patted Jay Bird on the back and said, "Howdy." Then Jay Bird had another fit of laughing and he laughed so loud that all of the others who were out playing came running up to see why he was laughing, and to see what he was laughing about and to welcome him home.

It was some time before Jay Bird could stop laughing long enough to tell them anything, but they all kept asking him to stop laughing and tell them what it was all about. But Jay Bird said that with flying so far and laughing so much he was pretty tired and hungry, and would like to have Bettie Bear fix him some breakfast before he settled down to tell about his trip. "But I will tell you this much right now while I am eating breakfast: What I have to tell you is worth waiting a week for, and I think Blackie ought to practice dancing before I tell him."

"All right," said Blackie; "Hurry up and finish your breakfast and I will go out on the porch and practice a bit."

Ford invites and welcomes comparison—with all cars—because so many of these features in high-priced cars are Ford V-8 features. For example, you must pay $2,500 to get the Ford type of engine in the next lowest cost car—the famous V-8 cylinder type that holds every land, water and air speed record. Welded steel spoke wheels, also, are found on the Ford alone under $3,200. A dozen other Ford V-8 superiorities would cost hundreds of dollars extra to obtain in other makes of cars.

These facts in themselves prove Ford V-8 value. But consider Ford comfort. Only this completely modern car gives you free action for all four wheels, plus sturdy axle construction. And don't forget the safety of Ford's all-steel body—here's a "life insurance" you must have in this day of crowded traffic.

Elaborate Pageant Honors Queen Shenandoah XI Today in Apple Fete Finale

Mrs. Whitney Is 11th Queen Of Festival

1934 Fete Ruler Follows Illustrious Line of Young Women.

By C. B. Carr.

Winchester, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—Mrs. John Hay Whitney, internationally known horsewoman, tonight reigned as Queen Shenandoah XI over the annual apple blossom festival here amid a scene of frivolity and open house to thousands of guests.

Mrs. Whitney rules over apple-blossom-covered Shenandoah-Potomac-Cumberland Valley of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, in which there are today 11,000,000 apple trees in their gorgeous springtime dresses of pink and white blossoms.

As eleventh in the line of the Shenandoahs who have ruled the blossom fetes in Winchester since 1924, Mrs. Whitney follows in the steps of an illustrious line of young ladies from Belgium, England, Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Miss Stech First Queen.

Miss Elizabeth Stech, of Winchester, was the first ruler of the festival, in 1924. A cheering throng of 10,000 acclaimed her coronation.

To Miss Eleanor Chiles, of Kernstown, Va., went the honor of being Queen Shenandoah II, and in 1926 Miss Priscilla Bridges, of Hancock, Md., was the third crowned.

In 1927 the festival organization returned to the Old Dominion and selected Mrs. Kenneth N. Gilpin, of Boyce, a daughter of the late Senator and Mrs. Laurence D. Tyson, of Tennessee.

Roanoke furnished the 1928 queen, Miss Mary Wise Boxley, debutante. In 1929, West Virginia furnished its first queen, Miss Mary Jo Mathews, of Mannington. The fete was more striking with the production of a complete parade division depicting the historical background of that State.

Miss Suzanne Pollard, daughter of former Gov. Pollard of Virginia, was the 1930 Queen Shenandoah VII. Miss Pollard is now Mrs. Herbert Lee Boatwright, jr.

English Girl Selected.

Winchester has always been proud of the fact that it was named for Winchester, England, and some years ago the bonds of friendship between the two cities were cemented when the English city sent its old Guild Hall flag to this municipality. Fete officials thought it appropriate to have an English girl as queen and in 1931 Miss Patricia Dacre Morton, daughter of a British army officer killed in the World War, was chosen Queen Shenandoah VIII. She was crowned by Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd.

Celebrating the George Washington Bicentennial in 1932, the fete selected a collateral descendant of George Washington, Miss Helen Ames Washington, of Overbrook, Pa., as Queen Shenandoah IX. She was crowned by Ambassador Claudel of France.

A daughter of Belgium, Miss Francoise May, daughter of the Ambassador to the United States and Mrs. Paul May, of Washington, reigned as queen of the 1933 festival.

150,000 Due At Fete Today In Winchester

Parade to Climax Gayety; Rain Postpones March of School Children.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Winchester, Va., May 3.—Winchester tomorrow will extend Southern hospitality to 150,000 visitors expected here to witness pageantry glorifying the blossoming of 11,000,000 apple trees and the triumphant reign of Mrs. John Hay Whitney as Queen Shenandoah XI of the annual Apple Blossom Festival.

The apple festival, which was inaugurated today, will reach its climax tomorrow afternoon when Queen Shenandoah rides through the streets amid the plaudits of her "subjects."

Here tonight were centered the thoughts of the people of the Shenandoah-Potomac-Cumberland commercial apple belt of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania; and the thousands of people from more than 20 States made observers believe this city is the capital of the Eastern apple-growing belt.

29 In Queen's Court.

With cares banished and a carefree spirit pervading, the crowds are celebrating the advent of the blossoms, while Winchester society matrons are seeing to it that Queen Shenandoah XI and her court of 29 princesses from as many girls' colleges enjoy their two days of royalty to the fullest degree.

Late tonight the blare of trumphets in a half-dozen dance halls ceased and the royalty, with their "subjects," sought a brief night's rest preparatory to the "big day" of the festival tomorrow.

Continuous rain today caused postponement of the parade of 3,000 school children of Frederick County. This feature will open the program tomorrow at 10 a. m.

At 11 a. m. 1,100 pupils of Winchester public schools will present a pageant, "The Spirit of the Years," on the esplanade of Handley High School. Garland R. Quarles, superintendent of Winchester schools, wrote and directed the pageant. The Handley High School Cadet Band will play.

Parade to Be Climax.

At noon tomorrow Queen Shenandoah and her court will be guests at luncheon at Thornhill Manor, the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Baker.

At 2 p. m. the festival will reach its climax when "The Trail of the Pink Petals," the grand feature parade, will begin. Queen Shenandoah XI will be carried on a white chariot drawn by four dapple gray horses, fancy Percherons imported by Mrs. Whitney for her Llangollen Farm, near Upperville.

On either side of the chariot there will be members of the Piedmont Hunt, of Upperville, Va., in full hunting fixture, as special escorts. Parade Director Jack T. Engle estimated that the parade will be 6 miles long and will require two hours

Dignitaries to Attend.

Dignitaries of State will review the parade at the Winchester Fair Grounds. Among the special guests will be Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia, United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, commander of the Virginia National Guard.

Following the parade there will be an aerial show at Admiral Byrd Airport.

The queen's ball, in historic Shenandoah Valley Academy tomorrow night, is the festival's outstanding social event. Her majesty and court will be attended by cadets from several military schools.

Apple Blossom balls in several Winchester dance halls will close the public festivities.

U. Va. Scientists Have Leading Roles at Session

Bean Will Exhibit Light Which Gives Off No Heat.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—Prominent among the Virginian scientists who will assemble for the twelfth annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science here tomorrow and Saturday will be members of the faculty of the University of Virginia.

Dr. William A. Kepner, professor of biology and president of the academy, will deliver his annual address before the session tomorrow evening, responding to an address of welcome by President Samuel P. Duke, of the Harrisonburg State Teachers' College, where the meetings will be held.

Sessions will be open to the public and will feature unique scientific demonstrations and exhibits. Among these will be an apparatus, demonstrated by Dr. Bean, of the University of Virginia, which can break the strongest steel by spinning at terrific speed; a newly developed cold light, which gives off adequate illumination but no heat, and a seismograph for the recording of earthquakes.

Scientific discussions will be held on the latest development in apple sprays and new treatment of poultry diseases. In the geology section papers will be read on Virginia manganese ore, volcanic deposits and the coastal erosion of Virginia.

Mining Man's Funeral Held.

Bristol, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—Services for Harry R. Stewart, 43, mine operation superintendent of the Clinchfield Coal Corporation, who died Tuesday at Dante, Va., were conducted from the Emmanuel Episcopal Church here yesterday.

Senior Play Actors of Other Years to Take Stage Tonight

Fredericksburg, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—A review of the dramatic productions of Fredericksburg High School since construction of its auditorium five years ago will be presented during the intermissions of "The Meal Ticket," to be presented by the senior class tomorrow night.

Members of the original casts of four high school senior plays will perform three skits written by Miss Helen Covey.

"Nothing But the Truth," presented by the Class of 1930, will be burlesqued in "Anything But the Truth," featuring Alice Jenkins, Bill Bailey, Frank Biscoe, and Jesse Gregory. The two plays, "The Royal Family," of 1931 and "The Swan," of 1932, will be combined and parodied together in "The Royal Duckling," returning to the stage Marika Abbey, Emily Lindsey, Mary Frances Rowe, Sidney Armstrong, Bill Rissmiller, and Leavelle Billingsley. "The Joke's on the Jury," will be presented by Jacqueline Smith, Alice Daw, Virginia Snellings, and Carl Gallahan as the burlesque of last year's play, "Ladies of the Jury."

The 24 players of "The Meal Ticket" include Cary Smith, Fontaine Briggs, Louise McGee, Miriam Parcell, Polly Jones, Paul Luck, Freddie Pitts, Lee Cooke, Ellsworth Carver, Roy Wymbs, Jimmie Ventura, Irving Batton, Manly Wright, Alnoris Curtis, David Gregory Sylvester Silver, Bobby Dice, Evelyn Cox, Lucille Snellings, Doris Thaxton, Edith Thompson, Hazel Fines, Elizabeth Cox, and Marian Karsten.

County, School Funds Slashed in Rockbridge

Lexington, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—The Rockbridge County Board of Supervisors adopted a 1934 budget reducing county fund and school levies 2 cents each, the former from 25 to 23 cents and the latter from 75 to 73 cents a $100.

Education Goal As Methodists End Conclave

Business Moves Quickly at Charlottesville Division Parley.

Culpeper, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—Christian education was stressed in the sixty-eighth annual session of the Charlottesville Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, convening in the Culpeper Church, which closed here tonight.

With Dr. Daniel T. Merritt, presiding elder of the Charlottesville district, in the chair, business was disposed of in record time, reports being limited to important facts from each circuit or church.

A talk on the history of Methodism, this being the sesquicentennial year, was given by the Rev. L. J. Vaughan. Principles and doctrines of the church were discussed by the Rev. George E. Powell, of the Louisa circuit.

Dr. J. W. Smith, Centenary Church, Richmond, delivered the conference sermon. He said it is the challenge of the church to meet the crisis of nations, and a responsibility that Christian people must not forfeit.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Oldaker, of Culpeper, evangelic singers of the Southern Conference, were in charge of the music for all services.

Thomas W. Hendrick, lay leader of the local church, was elected delegate to the annual conference meeting in Lynchburg in the fall.

It was noted in a statistical report that of the 20,000 unemployed ministers in the United States, not one Methodist pulpit is vacant.

Ballots Cast in '61 Election for Davis Found in Virginia

Leesburg, Va., May 3 (Spl.).—During recent alterations in the county clerk's office, R. M. Preston, in charge of indexing records, found a large package containing a thousand or more ballots which were cast in Loudoun County for Jefferson Davis and Alexander H. Stephens for president and vice president of the Confederacy, February 8, 1861.

Each voter wrote his name on the back of the ballot, and the tickets bear the signatures of many prominent Loudoun County citizens of that time.

Annapolis Small Arm Target Winners Listed

Annapolis, Md., May 3 (Spl.).—Officials of the Naval Academy announced winners of gold, silver and bronze medals for excellence in small arm target practice in the annual competition among second class midshipmen.

The winners in order are John H Brandt, Seattle, Wash.; Richard D Lynch, of Citronello, Ala., and J mes W. Crowther, Longfellow Mass.

Bank Pay-Off At Frederick Slated Soon

Six Per Cent to Be Paid 30,000; Reopening Delayed.

Frederick, Md., May 3 (Spl.).—Certificates of beneficial interest for approximately 30,000 depositors and accounts of the closed Central Trust Co., preliminary to the opening of five new banks in its place, is nearing completion, it was announced today. The first distribution will be 6 per cent.

The new banks are the Western Maryland Trust Co., with capital of $100,000 and surplus of $20,000, and independent State banks at Middletown, Walkersville, Poolesville and Sykesville, each with capital of $50,000 and surplus of $10,000.

While it was planned to open the new banks about May 1, so many details were involved that the preliminary work occupied more time than was forecast. One of the original plans which was altered was that of appointment of a committee for the revaluation of the Central Trust Co. assets for the determination of a fair liquidation value of the interests of 166 depositors who objected to the reorganization plan. It has now been decided that no such committee will be named. The revaluation is being done by a clerical force, under the supervision of H. E. Meeks, chief bank examiner, and will be subject to the approval of the circuit court.

One exception to the cash distribution is in the case of small depositors, where the cash distribution would amount to $5 or less. In these cases the cash will be paid outright.

The certificates of beneficial interest apply to the balances in accounts after payment of the first 6 per cent dividend. They will specify no amounts, since the balances depend on what is realized from the remaining assets.

Hopes that the new banks may be opened within the month were expressed today by W. Clinton McSherry, who drafted the reorganization plan.

McClelland, who is in Baltimore Jail, was reported to have denied the killing.

Cavalcade, Fit and Ready, May Go to Post in Derby a 2-1 Favorite

Sloane Star Responsive To Urging

Overcomes Nervousness Caused By Train Ride From Maryland.

14 Horses Expected to Go t oPost Tomorrow in Annual Classic.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3 (AP).—Apparently satisfied by today's good workout that the record-breaking English-bred colt, Cavalcade, is no longer either train-sick or subject to stage-fright, the rail-birds took a deep breath and voiced a ringing vote of confidence in the ability of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's horse to capture the sixtieth Kentucky Derby next Saturday.

Although this development by no means settles the matter to the satisfaction of one and all, the consensus now is that there will be no toast "to the ladies" after the 3-year-old classic is run off at Churchill Downs, despite the high respect in which Charles T. Fisher's filly, Mata Hari, or Col. E. R. Bradley's equine beauty, Bazaar, are held by horsemen.

Seen 2-to-1 Choice.

There's still a wide range of opinion on the big battle of the Bluegrass, with two days more in which to shift the odds or argue the prospects of a fleet field of thoroughbreds, but the indications are that Cavalcade, coupled with Time Clock, winner of this year's Florida Derby, as the Brookmeade Stable entry, will go to the post around 5 p. m. (C. S. T.) Saturday as a 2-to-1 choice.

The strength of Mrs. Sloane's contenders was shown by today's final workout, in which Time Clock ran the full Derby route of one mile and a quarter more than a full second faster than Cavalcade. Time Clock wats caught in 2:09 2-5, working handily, after Cavalcade, with the veteran Mack Garner in the saddle, negotiated the route in 2:10 3-5. The important feature, however, was that Cavalcade, after being under restraint for a mile, responded to Garner's urging for an impressive last quarter in 24 2-5 seconds.

Called Fit and Ready.

Observers were convinced that Cavalcade has completely shaken off a spell of nervousness or "jitters," caused by the train ride from Maryland. Trainer Bob Smith was frankly delighted with the test and pronounced both colts fit and ready. Inasmuch as Cavalcade has already equaled one record and broken another in competition in the East this spring, besides being bred to travel in any kind of going, the shortening of the price on the Brookmeade entry appears entirely logical.

For the time being, at least, it helps solve one of the most perplexing pre-Derby situations in years. Ever since last winter, candidates have been dropping in and out of the clouds to confound the critics and bookmakers. The speedy Mata Hari, a sensation whenever she chose to run at her best last year; Singing Wood, the 1933 Futurity winner; Sir Thomas, a maiden colt with plenty of backing, and Riskulus, Agua Caliente Derby winner, all have taken a turn at being the "hot" choice, only to "cool off" for one reason or another.

Gain Spotlight.

In fact, it looked like a big year for the West until developments of the last fortnight rapidly projected Cavalcade, Discovery and, finally, Peace Chance, all Eastern-owned horses, into the spotlight. Although Mata Hari still is held at the relatively short price of 7 to 2, Peace Chance, Joseph E. Widener's colt which broke the mile record for Churchill Downs this week, is now held at 5 to 1, and Discovery, owned by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, shares 8-to-1 odds with the filly, Bazaar. Sir Thomas and Riskulus are now at 15 to 1, as result of recent defeats.

There's so much speed, as well as uncertainty in this 3-year-old galaxy that the derby may prove a wide-open affair, if Cavalcade does not come up to expectations. Even Mata Hari and Bazaar, each touted to duplicate the victory of Regret, only filly ever to win the Derby, may surprise the talent, despite the conspicious unreliability of the female of the Equine species at this time of the year.

The arrival of Spy Hill, Mrs. Payne Whitney's English-bred colt, late this afternoon completed the Derby field. Spy Hill had an impressive workout at Jamaica this week and is considered distinctly a threat, if not affected by the belated train trip.

The names of 20 or more horses may be dropped into the entry box tomorrow, but only about 14 are expected to answer the bugle call on Saturday, when one of the biggest crowds in recent years is expected to witness the struggle for equine glory and around $40,000 in cash. The added money this year has been cut from $50,000 to $30,000, the lowest figure since 1920.

Sir Thomas
POOR MAN'S HORSE HEADED FOR FAVORITISM IN KENTUCKY DERBY...
FAST WORKOUTS HAVE GAINED SIR THOMAS MANY BACKERS...
IF I ONLY WERE JIMMY DURANTE!
HE HAS NEVER WON A RACE BUT FINISHED A NOSE BEHIND SINGING WOOD IN THE BELMONT FUTURITY.....
Jolo

Kentucky Backs Fast-Working Colt With Classic Nearing.

THE DERBY hopes of Kentucky will ride high on Sir Thomas when the "Poor Man's Horse" goes to the post in the Blue Grass State's annual turf classic at Churchill Downs Saturday. They will ride high against great odds, but it is the custom of Kentuckians to remain loyal to their own horseflesh regardless of odds.

In the first place, Sir Thomas is a maiden, and only twice in the 59-year history of the Derby has a maiden romped home ahead of the choice fields always attracted to the event. Sir Barton accomplished the feat in 1919, and, by grace of the skillfull booting of Don Meade, Broker's Tip managed to score last year.

The Sir Gallahad III 3-year-old remains a maiden only by virtue of some hair-raising, nosed-out finishes last year. Singing Wood scored a hairline win over the Gordon colt in the Belmont Futurity in perhaps the most heartrending defeat suffered by Sir Thomas. Without winning a race, the Gordon owned and operated colt was able to accumulate $10,600 in purses by placing twice and finishing third three times in eleven starts.

With regard to the "Poor Man's Horse" angle, A. B. Gordon is not, of course, a pauper. But he is no Whitney or Widener—only a race track competitor of theirs. Loyal Kentuckians point out that he trained Nellie Morse when she captured the 1924 Preakness against the best the East had to offer and firmly believe he can repeat at the Downs this year—especially with a horse that is breezing the distance in 2:10, speed enough to win most Derbys.

Virginia to Start Rogers Tomorrow

Hurling Ace Faces Tarheels in Greensboro Game.

Greensboro, N. C., May 3 (AP).—Orlin Rogers, Virginia's ace pitcher, is being saved by Gus Tebell, coach of the Cavalier nine, for the final game of the Carolina-Virginia series to be played here Saturday night.

Rogers will be seen in action tomorrow against North Carolina in left field and in the clean-up position in the batting order, but he is not due to work on the mound until the Cavaliers meet the Tarheels in their third contest.

Against Navy, Vermont, Maryland, North Carolina, V. M. I., William and Mary and Washington and Lee, Rogers has pitched 65 innings, of which 60 have been scoreless. He shut out Navy, Vermont and Washington and Lee and has not had a team score more than three runs against him. He has piled up a strikeout record of 83, fanning 19 men in the Vermont game and 15 each in games with Navy and V. M. I.

Carolina beat him in Charlottesville, 3 to 1.

He is a native of Pittsylvania County, in Virginia just over the Carolina line, and he has been a mainstay of the Cavalier pitching staff for two years. Among other achievements, he has been listed on the dean's list of distinguished students in four of the eight terms he has completed.

Cubs Shut Out, Get Two Hits Off Brandt

Defeated, 6 to 0, by Braves; Southpaw Retires 18 Men in Row.

CHICAGO, May 3 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs' southpaw jinx arose again today in the form of Ed Brandt, who restricted them to just two infield singles, and the Boston Braves battered. Pat Malone for a 6-to-0 triumph in the opening game of the series.

Throttled twice previously this season by left-handed pitching, the Cubs found Brandt much too big a problem. Going the route for the first time of the campaign, the big Brave hurler allowed only three men to reach first base, and only one got past that point. He fanned three, and for the most part had the Cub sluggers hitting into the dirt or lifting to the outfielders.

Fourth Loss of Year.

The defeat was the Cubs' fourth of the season, and was the first time they failed to score. After Brandt walked Augie Galan, the first man to face him, he retired the next 18 batsmen in order. It was not until the seventh that Billy Herman smashed a single off Marty McManus' glove that Brandt gave up a hit. Gabby Hartnett handcuffed Third Baseman Pinky Whitney with his drive in the ninth for the other single.

Dodgers Rally in 8th To Nose Out Reds, 3-2

Cincinnati, May 3 (AP).—Ray Benge, whose previous pitching this season has been erratic, subdued the Reds with five hits today while the Brooklyn Dodgers came through with a smashing eighth inning rally to defeat the Reds 3 to 2 today.

The Reds didn't make a hit until the fifth and the only time they were troublesome was in the eighth when Gordon Slade and Ernie Lombardi connected with singles and Johnny Moore slammed a triple for both Cincinnati runs.

Roesch Gains Semifinals In Golf

Shorey, Pitt, De Stefano Also Survive Tourney Battle in Mud.

THROUGH the muck and mire of Washington Golf and Country Club's course, the four mud horses of golf—Frank Roesch, of the host club; Harry G. Pitt, of Manor; John C. Shorey, of Kenwood, and Joe De Stefano, of Georgetown University—yesterday galloped into the semifinals of the club's invitation tournament.

Defying an all-day rain, Roesch, tournament medalist, reached the round before the finals by crushing Luther C. Steward, jr., of Congressional, 6 and 5, in his morning match, and eliminating the veteran Miller B. Stevinson, of Columbia, in the afternoon, 4 and 3.

De Stefano, formerly a member of Georgetown's golf team, but comparatively unknown in local tournament golf, put out Capt. Kendall J. Fielder, Army and Navy star, 2 up, and R. T. (Lefty) Harrell, of Washington, 5 and 3.

Roesch and De Stefano will clash this morning at 10:10 in the upper bracket of the championship flight, while in the lower bracket, the perennial rivals, Pitt and Shorey, will battle at 10:20.

Pitt, playing superbly, waded through two matches in near-par fashion. The Moose defeated M. Parker Nolan, Indian Spring heavyweight, 4 and 3, and Martin McCarthy, Beaver Dam's big gun, 2 and 1, while Shorey eliminated Jimmy Drain, of Washington, the 1931 invitation winner, 3 and 2, and Maury Fitzgerald, a club companion, by the same score.

Carnera and Baer Sign For Bout

Procedure Is Uneventful as Fireworks Fail to Materialize.

Challenger to Set Up His Training Camp at Asbury Park.

NEW YORK, May 3 (AP).—The superdreadnaught of the sockers, Primo Carnera, met Max Bear, his glittering challenger, socially today for the last time before their heavyweight title tussle on June 14, and the honors rest until then with the huge Italian champion.

The occasion was the formal signing for the 15-round match in the Madison Square Garden bowl on Long Island and the boys gathered eagerly for the belated ceremony, hoping for physical fireworks after the verbal lambasting the pair have been giving each other for the past few days.

Bear, picture of the well-dressed man, was waiting in the Garden Club as the champion heaved his great bulk into the picture. Carnera marched straight to him, showing all his ivory in a toothy smile, and grabbed the challenger's fist in one of the mightiest hand shakes in fistic history.

Baer Winces at Grip.

"How you feel?" bellowed Primo, putting all his 275 pounds into his grip.

Baer winced and bent slightly.

"I'll feel better June 14," he admitted sourly.

Maximilian recovered in time to bust up the orderly procedure of the filming of the occasion by announcing in the middle of a couple of rehearsed speeches that there was no maybe about the situation, that he was the next heavyweight champion and that was that. But it was obvious his day was ruined, that for the rest of the afternoon he was trying to make up lost ground.

While Carnera has decided definitely that he will train at Pompton Lakes, N. J., officials at Asbury Park, N. J., announced today that Ancil Hoffman, manager of the challenger, had decided to pitch camp there instead of Atlantic City. No formal announcement is likely, however, until Jack Dempsey, who will have much to say about Baer's training, arrives here next week.

Thil Easily Defeats Roth in Paris Battle

Paris, May 3 (AP).—Marcel Thil, French claimant of the world's middleweight championship, won a 15-round match tonight from the Belgian challenger, Gustave Roth.

Thil piled up a decisive margin in the final rounds, taking an easy decision. He weighed 157½ pounds, Roth 157.

Nats, Indians Shift Slab Choices

Whitehill Faces Pearson in Ladies' Day Bill at Stadium Today.

By Shirley L. Povich
Sports Editor of The Post).

TODAY, it's the man who pays at Griffith Stadium where the ladies will be the guests of the management, barring interference by the weather man, who yesterday dealt out a blank for the American League schedule in general and the start of the Washington-Cleveland series in particular.

With the rain bringing surcease to his long-suffering pitching staff, Manager Joe Cronin last night switched his pitching plans for the series opener with the Indians today. Earl Whitehill, who showed positive signs of rounding into form in his eight-inning outing against the Yankees early in the week, has been scheduled to pitch today in lieu of Al Thomas, who will be saved for duty tomorrow.

The Nats will be tasting competition against the West for the first time this season when they encounter the Indians, a great many of whom will be celebrating Old Home Week in Washington, what with Pitcher Lloyd Brown, Catcher Roy Spencer, Outfielder Sam Rice, Manager Walter Johnson and Coach Patsy Gharrity having been Griffith Stadium landmarks while serving with the Nats.

Off to Fast Start.

Walter Johnson has brought his Indians to Washington as a second-place club, with six victories and four defeats to their credit. They have been feeding upon weaker competition in the West and, like all Cleveland clubs of the past decade, are away to a fast start.

For the Nats' disapproval, Johnson today plans to present Pitcher Monte Pearson, the young fellow who was last year's pitching sensation of the league, and whom the Nats have learned to regard with respect born of their futility to accomplish much against his offerings. Johnson's original choice for today's game was Oral Hildebrand, but, like Cronin, he changed his plans.

Jackson Star, Giants Top Pirates

Bats in Four Runs With Triple and Homer in 5-to-3 Victory.

Clark, in His First Start, Is Yanked in Fourth; Lead Increased.

PITTSBURGH, May 3 (AP).—Travis Jackson, who only yesterday was taken out of the New York line-up for a pinch hitter, today batted the Giants to a 5-to-3 triumph over the Pirates as the world's champions opened their first Western tour of the National League season.

Jackson batted in four of the Giant runs with two mighty wallops. The first was a triple with the corners crammed in the third inning which brought about the downfall of Left Larry French. The other was a home run off Waite Hoyt's delivery in the ninth which clinched the Giant triumph.

The Giants collected their other runs in the fourth when singles by Relief Flinger Hi Bell and Joe Moore and errors by Lloyd Waner and Tommy Thevenow loaded the bases. Hal Smith, who followed French on the hill, then passed Mel Ott to force Bell across the plate. Before Jackson's triple Moore and Hughey Critz had smashed singles and Manager Bill Terry had beaten out a bunt.

Clark Is Yanked.

William Watson Clark, the southpaw who is considered about the most doubtful member of the Giant staff, essayed his first start of the season but lost control and was yanked in the fourth after giving up all three Pirate runs. In the third Tom Padden, Lloyd Waner and Paul Waner hit singles for one tally, then a misplay by George Watkins and a wild pitch let the younger Waner tally a second.

The Giants with their victory today increased their lead to a game and a half over the Cubs, who were beaten by the Braves, 6 to 0.

Ring Commission Post Turned Down by Payne

The District Commissioners continued the chase for the remaining appointee to the new boxing commission in full cry yesterday, with the customary negative results. Some time in the afternoon the nimrodic District heads treed John Barton Payne with an offer, but the distinguished jurist doubled back on them by declining the honor.

Today the Commissioners will tender a berth on the boxing governing board to another "dark horse," also a prominent lawyer.

Whitney Colt Pays $3.80 Mutuel

Maddening Is Second; Douceur Closes Fast, Finishes Third.

Cantersine Takes First; Muskogee Triumphs in Jumping Race.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent)

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 3. The Whitney interests dominated the running of the Pimlico Homebred, today's feature race over this muddy track. Mister Gander, representing C. V. Whitney, was first; Maddening, representing Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable, was second, and Douceur, representing Mrs. John Hay Whitney, was third. The rest of the field competed for the $25 fourth money, and S. W. Labrot won it with his Little Dinah.

There was much interest in the appearance of Mister Gander. He was born with a silver spoon in his mouth as far as race horses are concerned. His daddy was Chicle and his mama was Flying Witch. Those are rather high-hat parents in turfdom. Thus Mister Gander is a full brother of Whichone and Mother Goose, a pair of horses that made racing history for the late H. P. Whitney.

Plenty of Glory.

As the race was run, there was plenty of glory for Mister Gander. Making his second start, the juvenile broke in back of his field while Dark Vive and Little Dinah cut out a sizzling pace in the sloppy going. Mister Gander did not stay out of the contention long, however. Workman soon had him in high and the colt bounded up to take the lead. Maddening and Douceur, not prominent until straightened out in the stretch, went after the leader and both closed fast on him at the finish. Douceur was going like an express train and might have won in a few more strides. The margins at pay-off time were a half length for Mister Gander and a nose for Maddening over Douceur.

Mister Gander's ability was no secret and after threatening to be even money, he paid $3.80.

The Sage Stable's Cakewalker scored in the second two and a half lengths ahead of Legume, which might have won but for going wide coming into the stretch. Buffoonery, of the well-played Mrs. J. H. Whitney entry, was the show proposition. The winner paid $12.60.

Muskogee used to earn his keep in the claiming division but he has now developed into a pretty fair sort of jumper. He demonstrated his ability today when he won by four lengths over Kummel and six lengths over St. Francis, the odds-on favorite. St. Francis appeared to have the race won but made a bad landing at the twelfth fence and tired thereafter. Muskogee, which had been closest to the pace, went into command nearing the final jump and coasted to the finish line. Kummel closed with a rush to take the place. Muskogee, ridden by one N. Brown, was an $8.80 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERSINE, $13.60, $8.00, $4.90; TIGHT WAD, $4.50, $3.30; MANAGER BILL, $4.40.

CANTERSINE, showing good ability in the footing and breaking swiftly, resisted repeated efforts from TIGHT WAD throughout the running, and outstayed the latter under a hard drive. TIGHT WAD secured racing room on the inside of the winner in the early stages, made strong efforts, and then fought it out courageously. MANAGER BILL, slow to settle in his stride, came to the outside, and was gaining steadily approaching the finish. ASKE sprawled repeatedly in the goins, and was never dangerous. TODY WEST showed speed in spots. TAUNTON lacked speed throughout. SANDY BELLE tired.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Blue Ridge. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:45. Off at once. Winner, Sage Stable's ch. c. (2), by Mad Hatter—Flourish. Trained by P. M. Walker. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 3-5, 0:56 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAKEWALKER, $12.60, $5.50, $2.90; LEGUME, $4.00, $2.50; BUFFOONERY, $2.30.

CAKEWALKER, stoutly handled to assume a slight lead soon after the start, moved clear when straightened into the home stretch, and under steady pressure, came out ahead of LEGUME, a keen factor in the first quarter-mile, swerved in entering the home stretch, and then tired. BUFFOONERY began quickly, but could not stay with the leaders. She raced greenly, while saving ground. DOUBLETON could not threaten at any stage. LUCKY BILL was held safe. BUY STRAIGHT was outrun. SIMPLE FLOWER met with interference, and was crowded back going to the turn.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Harford Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:13. Off at 3:15. Winner, J. Bosley, jr.'s ch. g. (4), by Rockminister—Nell McChord. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, 100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:06 2-5 (13 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MUSKOGEE, $8.80, $4.10, $2.80; KUMMEL, $8.30, $3.60; ST. FRANCIS, $2.20.

MUSKOGEE, taken under strong restraint for the first turn of the field, responded stoutly after clearing the tenth fence, and disposing of ST. FRANCIS, came out nicely when approaching the finish. KUMMEL, rated for the first mile and one-half, closed gamely thereafter. ST. FRANCIS, steadied to all of his fences when in command, tired badly in the last half-mile after making a bad landing at the twelfth jump. ZERMATT was always outrun. LADALA trailed far back the entire trip. JILTED and HOLE HIGH fell at the tenth fence.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Pimlico Homebred (entries). For 2-year-olds. Slo ing good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:44. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISTER GANDER, $3.80, $2.90, $2.40; MADDENING, $3.00, $3.00; DOUCEUR, $6.30.

MISTER GANDER, sluggish at the start, was hard hustled to reach a forward position while on the outside of the leaders, responded to vigorous handling to wear down DARK VIVE and LITTLE DINAH when entering the home stretch, and then had to be shaken up strongly to stall off MADDENING. Latter slipped through on the inside at the stretch turn, and finished with good courage. DOUCEUR worked her way up on the outside, and came strongly in the final drive. LITTLE DINAH weakened after disposing of DARK VIVE. HOT GRIDDLE lost ground the entire trip. DARK VIVE had nice speed in the early stages. IWINTOO broke swiftly, but lacked speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:20½. Winner, R. Parr's ch. f. (4), by Colin—Kathleen. Trained by E. Trueman. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:16 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORRYMEELA, $4.40, $3.10, $2.40; STEP AWAY, $4.50, $3.40; ELECTRIC GAFF, $2.70.

CORRYMEELA, suited by the footing and kept close to the early pacemaker, moved up stoutly entering the home stretch to gain command, and hard hustled, outlasted STEP AWAY. Latter went into clear lead directly after the start, saved ground, and then came again after being displaced. ELECTRIC GAFF, well placed from the beginning, held on well when the final test came. JIM ROBIN broke slowly, worked his way up on the inside, but could not better his position in the final drive. POST BRIGADE was held safe. SOLACE weakened fast after five furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. The Forest Lore. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, second. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:50½. Winner, J. B. Belk's ch. m. (5), by Blazes—Mabel A. Trained by R. Merritt. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1.42, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAMING MAMIE, $5.30, $3.20, $2.20; HONEYSWEET, $8.10, $3.50; UNENCUMBERED, $2.90.

FLAMING MAMIE, at home in the going, was badly blocked when attempting to squeeze through on the inside of HONEYSWEET when leaving the back stretch, finally secured racing on the inside at the stretch turn, and coming to the outside thereafter, was up in the last sixteenth. She appeared much the best. HONEYSWEET, a keen factor early, was forced HER GOLD down when straightened into the home stretch, but faltered during the closing furlong. UNENCUMBERED raced strongly while holding a forward position, but swerved out and finished very wide during the stretch drive. HER GOLD sprinted into a safe lead, but flattened out badly when put to a drive. GLORITONE and SUN MONK were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. The Hilltop. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:16½. Winner, Mrs. J. M. Black's b. m. (6), by Dunlin—Parade. Trained by J. M. Black. Value to winner, $600; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:15 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FERVID, $5.70, $2.50, $2.20; NED O., $2.60, $2.50; GAY PARTY, $3.70.

FERVID, racing close to the pacemaker from the beginning, took command when straightened into the home stretch, and then drew out steadily at the end. NED O., rushed away into a brief lead, saved ground, but could not stay with the winner when challenged. GAY PARTY was stoutly ridden the entire trip, and was best of the others. FACILLATE, breaking slower than usual, was blocked when attempting to slip through on the inside of EBONY TORCH midway of the back stretch, went to the outside thereafter, but could not menace the leaders. TEENIE R. was going gamely at the end. EBONY TORCH showed a flash of early speed.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Glittings. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:45. Off at once. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANNACH LATH, $5.80, $4.10, $3.10; SOURCE CIRCLE, $6.80, $4.20; LITTLE STOKES, $3.50.

BANNACH LATH, going in her best form and favored by improved handling, worked her way up to leaders on the outside until entering the home stretch, came through on the inside of SOURCE CIRCLE thereafter, and was drawing clear gradually when in command. SOURCE CIRCLE, well up from the beginning, shook off PRO BONO and PORTEUSE, but could not resist the winner. LITTLE STOKES came gamely from a slow beginning. BARCELONA PETE showed a good effort. PORTEUSE was made too much of early, and stopped. KILTAMOND raced in dull fashion. PRO BONO stopped badly.

Stocks Check Decline With Average Gain

Recovery Is Slight as Sales Total Drops to 1,153,090 Shares.

New York, May 3 (AP).—The decline in stocks was checked today, but the market accomplished little in the way of recovery. The closing verage was a shade higher, yet net declines for the whole list still outnumbered advances. Transactions reached the modest total of 1,153,090 shares.

Occasional firmness in the stock market, especially during the morning, suggested that shorts were covering some lines recently put out. Group movements here and there looked like an attempt to revive speculative interest on the long side, the best gainers being the sugars, which were stimulated by reports that President Roosevelt would soon sign the sugar bill.

Phone Shares Steady.

American Telephone steadied, rising a point at one time, though it closed unchanged. U. S. Smelting canceled a 3-point rise.

Rails jogged along on a level track and the light and power shares did likewise. Steels, chemicals, mail orders and motors moved narrowly. Chrysler was firm, perhaps in anticipation of the 25-cent extra dividend and the favorable earnings statement made public after the close.

American Sugar's gain was more than 2 points. Spiegel May Stern improved after yesterday's substantial reaction. Socony-Vacuum was helped by announcement of its 1933 results and Standard of Indiana, whose report is expected soon, firmed a point. Liquor shares were easy.

Stock Exchange Bill.

Wall street's attention was largely taken up with the stock exchange regulation bill, which made progress on its way through the House, and with conjecture as to how far seasonal influences were likely to affect business through the coming weeks.

Now that inflationary prospects have taken a back seat the financial community is carefully studying domestic business indices and is also considering the broad problem of international trade.

Gen. Johnson's remarks about the codes and news of a prospective campaign to freshen interest in NRA were read with interest.

Wool Market.

Boston, May 3 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture).—A few manufacturers inquired for combing wool, but they apparently were not in any hurry to buy. Occasionally they took a few sample bags. In many cases the chief interest was in determining the qualities, amounts and prices of wools available. Quotations were about steady to firm on spot domestic wools. There were indications of sentiment up a little in the market by the fact that opening prices at London this week were off less from their previous close than had been anticipated before the opening.

Robey's Review

Treasury Points Out the "Hidden Budget" Data Are Published; Shortcoming Is That They Are Too Late to Serve the Need.

By Ralph West Robey.

In a letter from the Treasury Department exception is taken, and I think quite properly, to one aspect of my discussion here has Tuesday of the hidden budget of the Government. In my piece I stated that in addition to the ordinary and extraordinary budgets there also is a hidden budget—a budget composed of outlays made through the substitution of Governmentally guaranteed obligations for private obligations. I applied the term "hidden budget" to these outlays because they do not appear in the daily statement of the Treasury and concluded that accurate accounting practice "makes it imperative that the amount for which the Government is obligated in these ways at least be shown as a contingent liability."

The Treasury Department bases its objection upon the fact that the items are listed as contingent liabilities in its monthly "Statement of the Public Debt of the United States." Unquestionably this should have been mentioned in my discussion. I also should have included the fact that, of course, the amounts involved are available from time to time in the reports of the organizations engaged in such substitution of Governmentally guaranteed bonds for private obligations.

Inclusion Would Not Have Altered Conclusion.

Inclusion of these facts, however, while needed for completeness, would not have changed the conclusion. Both the monthly statement of the public debt and the reports of the organizations concerned are extremely slow in appearing. For example, the last monthly statement of the public debt is as of December 31, 1933, although, according to the Treasury Department, the one for January 31, 1934, will be available in a few days. It must be evident, nevertheless, that for the purpose of getting an accurate and complete picture of the state of Federal finances it is not sufficient to have figures that are from three to four months old. What we need, especially when the Government is pouring out funds at its present rate, is information that at most is only a few days old.

The objection that may be made to such a demand is that the accounting involved makes delay inevitable. There is strength in such a point, of course, but the fact remains that either the picture presented should be complete or else specific mention should be made of its shortcomings. In the daily Treasury statement this is not done. Rather we are given a statement of the "public debt" as of, say, three days earlier that does not include the particular Government bonds involved in this hidden budget. To be complete and satisfactory an item or footnote should be included making it clear that in addition to the amount given there were outstanding as of such and such a date so many other bonds for which the Government is liable.

Present Accounting Is Inconsistent.

As a matter of fact I think the Treasury should go somewhat further than this. At present it includes in the public debt the net advances of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. At least a substantial portion of these have been loaned against security that in every respect is just as good as the security for the loans of, say, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It seems to me that if these RFC advances are to be considered a part of the public debt we also should include the advances through the hidden budget. Or if the hidden budget is not to be included as a part of the public debt, neither should we include loans of the same character that have been made by the RFC.

Which of the methods is followed probably makes little difference in the final analysis. Our Treasury accounting tradition would indicate that both should be included. The important thing, however, is merely that the full facts be presented, and be presented with sufficient promptness for us to be able to appraise the situation today, not as of four months ago.

Bond Prices Turn Down; Federals Up

Trading Is Featureless and Dull; Transfers Total $10,447,000.

New York, May 3 (AP).—Interest in listed bonds lagged today and only U. S. Government securities were able to make any sort of a showing in the dull and featureless trading.

Transfers totaled $10,447,000, par value, against $16,082,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues eased one-tenth of a point to 86.9.

The day's aggregate business was the smallest in about a month.

Federal Turnover Drops.

The turnover in the Federal section dropped from around $6,300,000 in the previous session to $1,300,000. Most of the Liberty Loans were unchanged on the day, but three of the Treasuries made new highs for the past year or longer and gains ranged from 1-32d to 5-32ds of a point. Treasury 3s reached a record peak at 100.5, up 2-32ds.

The market was interested in Secretary Morgenthau's statement that the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund could be used to purchase silver, if necessary, but the feeling in financial circles was that the huge stake would more likely be turned to the support of Government bonds should such support be required. Much interest was expressed in the Treasury's announcement that its purchases of Government bonds for the various sinking funds already showed a profit of some $10,000,000.

List of Gainers.

Moderate gains were held by some issues of Otis Steel, Philadelphia Electric, American Rolling Mill, American Writing Paper, Santa Fe, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & Western Indiana, Republic Steel, Southern Pacific, Warner Bros., Goodrich, Goodyear, Midvale Steel and Milwaukee Electric.

Losers of fractions to around a point included loans of New Haven, N. Y. Central, Kresge, International Telephone, Illinois Central, Great Northern, Erie, Wabash, United Drug, Texas & Pacific, Frisco, Chicago & North Western, Chile Copper, Chesapeake & Ohio, Baltimore & Ohio, Alleghany Corporation and Phillips Petroleum.

Foreign obligations were quiet and mildly mixed. German loans recovered fractionally and improvement was shown by bonds of Dutch East Indies, Chile and Argentina.

Curb's Losses Narrowed as Selling Wanes

Quotations Close Mixed on Lighter Turnover of 177,000 Shares.

New York, May 3 (AP).—Price fluctuations narrowed in curb trading today as selling was largely checked. The close was a bit irregular, but few important shares showed more than fractional variations.

Trading represented one of the slowest five-hour periods this year. Only 177,000 shares changed hands, compared with 204,000 yesterday.

Some offerings appeared in the last few minutes, but made little impression except in some of the alcohols. Hiram Walker yielded about a point. Distillers-Seagrams and Canadian Industrial Alcohol A eased fractionally.

Bunker Hill & Sullivan, in small transfers, recovered about 3 points of its 3½-point drop yesterday. Tubize Chatillon A gained 2⅝. Fisk Rubber, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Humble Oil and Sherwin Williams were fairly firm. American Gas & Electric dipped a major fraction, but Electric Bond & Share finished unchanged. Metals were about even.

Futility of Prohibiting Selling Below Costs Is Cited by Expert

By Anna P. Youngman.

In an address on cost protection and pricing, delivered before members of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Col. Robert H. Montgomery, who acts as adviser to the Research and Plannnig Division of the NRA, said, "I would not use any cost formula as a protection to fair prices, because I believe that prices must be based on present conditions, much influenced by our estimates of future conditions.

"Col. Montgomery, who is an outstanding accountant and tax expert, then proceeded to show why it is impossible to devise a uniform cost formula for price regulation in view of the unknown factors governing production costs. Cost accounting, he said, must be adapted to the needs of the individual company, and it is highly important that a knowledge of costs should be available as a guide to business conduct. But such information will not of itself prevent distress sales—it is merely an "essential tool" of a well-managed concern.

Price-Cutting Charges Should Be Investigated.

These strictures upon the application of cost of production formula do not imply that Col. Montgomery thinks that there is no way by which to control destructive price cutting, which takes the form of sales below production costs. He suggests that the existence of such price cutting should be tested to determine the lowest reasonable cost in any industry.

In case of complaints, it would be necessary to investigate the circumstances of the individual case and reach a decision on the basis of expert judgment regarding such controversial cost factors as depreciation, overhead, reproduction values, &c. Otherwise, Col. Montgomery concludes that the time spent in each industry in trying to work out an unworkable uniform system can better be used in working out what the maximum consumption of the product will be. That, as he says, is a real factor in price protection.

Probably no economic fallacy is more firmly entrenched in the minds of the layman and the average business man than the notion that cost of production controls selling prices or ought to control them. This belief is embalmed in our tariff legislation, it is enshrined in our text books and it has become a rallying cry for numerous codified industries. And yet costs are not only incapable of standardization by industries, but cost data are records of the past which offer a very uncertain guide to the conduct of future business, which must be constantly adapted to changing consumptive demands and incalculable conditions.

Excess Goods Supplies Can Not Be Spirited Away.

The heavy losses suffered during the years of depression should disabuse the public mind of the notion that there is any way by which industry can be safeguarded from selling below cost under pressure of necessity. Certainly excess supplies of goods accumulated through errors of judgment or unsalable at profitable prices, for reasons that could not be foreseen, will not be spirited away by simple agreements to maintain prices above production costs.

Bad management, excessive allowances for executive salaries, avoidable waste and other factors may swell the volume of deficits unduly and exaggerate the extent to which sales below reasonable costs are actually being made, but no formula will prevent distress sales, often far below cost of production, during periods of prolonged depression. Moreover, as prices change, estimated profits alter. Inventories may be marked up or marked down. Computations as to replacement costs have to be considered, while allowances for the overhead costs of unused capacity present a vexing problem to the cost accountant.

In short, the complexities of ascertaining profits and loss under present-day conditions are bewildering. The single concern may solve the problem to its own satisfaction, but it is absurd to try to find an answer that would satisfy an entire industry. Knowledge of the factors that enter into production costs and careful analysis of them are essential to intelligent planning and avoidance of rash policies which are the result of ignorance. But the value of an adequate cost-accounting system for any company is that it helps to prevent mistakes; it can not save industry from shouldering the burden of past errors which necessitate costly adjustments.

Wheat Values Sink Again as Rains Continue

Speculative Activity Drops; Corn and Oats Join Lower Trend.

Chicago, May 3 (AP).—Lower prices for grains resulted today from general showery conditions that tended to remove anxiety as to drought dangers for crops.

A decided curtailment of speculative activity in wheat, and other cereals as well, was apparent, many traders holding off to await more definite indications as to whether widespread prolonged shortage of moisture was about ended, or would become worse.

Monetary developments, including a statement by Secretary Morgenthau that the United States Treasury $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, could be utilized for the purchase of silver, attracted only passing notice.

Wheat Closes Unstable.

Wheat closed unstable at almost the day's bottom figures, ⅝ to ⅞ under yesterday's finish; corn ¼ to ⅝ down; oats, ⅛ to ¼ off, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to an equal advance.

From the outset, downhill action formed the rule in all the grain pits, despite transient rallies associated with talk that soaking downpours were needed, and that any drought relief short of this would not change the crop outlook to a material degree.

One deterrent to speculative purchasing was a report from a leading crop expert who is touring the Northwest and who wired that showers, although not heavy enough to replenish subsoil reserve moisture, would nevertheless give spring wheat a fair, although late start.

Drawing on Stocks.

Assertions that to meet current needs some millers were drawing on accumulated stocks of wheat in Chicago failed to act as much of an offset.

First boats of the season arrived at Fort William, Canada, today, and lake navigation is expected to be officially opened tomorrow. Overseas demand for wheat today, however, was reported as only fair for wheat from this side of the Atlantic, with Liverpool quotations way too low to permit of any business except in grain from Canada or Argentina.

Russian exports of 248,000 bushels of wheat were noted, and 765,000 bushels from along the Danube.

Steel Output Rises 2 Points To 58 Per Cent

Further Employment Gains Reported by Plants; Earnings Up.

New York, May 3 (AP).—Steel production has made another gain in the past week, rising two points to 58 per cent of capacity or close to last July's top, this week's Iron Age said.

The rate of expansion, the review stated, "was retarded by labor difficulties in automobile plants which resulted in temporary suspension of steel shipments.

"Just how high that rate will go is a matter of conjecture. The assumption that a large part of recent contract coverage represents speculative tonnage and that output will necessarily suffer a sharp drop after the completion of this quarter may not be entirely justified.

Specifications Fall Short.

"Specifications to date have been large but they have not come up to expectations. In fact, considerable tonnage in the aggregate was canceled on May 1 because April quotas were not fully specified. Unless releases mount rapidly in the next 15 days mills will find it physically impossible to turn out all of the tonnage covered by contracts before June 30."

April pig iron production was 12 per cent above March and reached the highest rate since last August. A further expansion for May is indicated by a net increase of 13 active blast furnaces since April 1. Total pig iron output last month was 1,754,647 tons, against 1,619,534 in March.

The American Iron & Steel Institute reports further gains in employment in the steel industry during March brought the total number of wage earners in this field up to 90 per cent of the peak period of 1929.

Wage Earners Reemployed.

During the month, it was stated, 15,166 wage earners were reemployed, making a total of 380,471 workers receiving hourly, piecework or tonnage wages compared with 365,305 in the preceding month. Including those on a salary basis, there were 419,277 employes in the industry during March. The figures, it was explained were taken from the reports of 225 member companies of the iron and steel code and reflected the greatest activity in the industry since the code became effective last August.

In addition to the upturn in employment, average earnings per hour were said to have increased from 58.7 cents in February to 58.9, and the total wages paid in March increased from $27,394,221 to $33,010,060. The March wage figure does not reflect the general 10 per cent increase in the industry which became effective April 1. This increase adds approximately $36,000,000 annually to the industry's pay roll.

Electric Output Climbs.

Chicago, May 3 (AP).—Electricity output in the Chicago district for the week ended April 28 was 96,147,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 85,031,000 kilowatt hours the corresponding week of 1933, an increase of 13.1 per cent.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

In a baseball game between the Arnold and Thedford teams in Franklin, Neb., last fall, Pitcher Clarence Mitchell, formerly of the New York Giants, pitched for both sides. In 18 innings, nine for each team, Mitchell allowed only four hits. Arnold won the game, 2 to 1, giving Mitchell credit for a victory. He was also charged with one defeat as pitcher for the Thedford team.

Mitchell got no hits himself. He could not very well pitch to himself.

The codfish has a reputation for eating almost anything that comes its way, and it is of record that at least once a cod swallowed a whole quart of whisky at one gulp—bottle and all.

The fish was caught inside the 12-mile limit off the coast of Maine five years ago by three fishermen from Islesboro, Me. It weighed 70 pounds. In its stomach the fishermen found a bottle of liquor, sealed and still intact. The liquor was probably thrown overboard by a rum-runner during pursuit by a revenue cutter.

• • • •

Tomorrow: The one-eyed champ.

Colors give added realism to strange things and happenings illustrated by John Hix on a full page in The Sunday Post.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Immigrants.

We used to stand with open arms and brag about our country's charms, inviting everyone to come and help to make the pulleys hum. We met the stranger on the beach, assuring him he was a peach, and saying, with a cordial smile, "Take off your things and stay a while." We didn't ask the stranger guest a lot of things that jarred his breast; he wasn't asked to show his kale or prove he'd never been in jail; we simply grabbed him by the hand, and dragged him on to solid land, and showed him, in those days of yore, the "Welcome" mat at our front door. But all things change as years roll on, and now the "Welcome" mat is gone. The pilgrim comes across the foam to build himself a hearth and home, here where the Spangled Banner waves, and voters never shall be slaves. We meet him at the landing place and tell him he is off his base. His country's quota has been filled, he can not hang around and build a home or barn or other shack, to his own land he must go back. The pilgrim is, alas, no more caressed and fondled on this shore, we bid the immigrant decamp, and in our window there's no lamp. We've men enough for all our tasks, and tragedy wears many masks.
